Two More Local Democrats Join Race for Lowey’s Seat

By Martin Wilbur

A former national security official under President Barack Obama and a Sleepy Hollow resident were the latest entries into the growing field of Democrats looking to succeed Rep. Nita Lowey in the 17th Congressional District.

Chappaqua resident Evelyn Farkas, who served as the deputy assistant secretary of defense for Russia, Ukraine and Eurasia in the Obama administration, announced her candidacy Monday.

Last Thursday, Allison Fine, a recent national board chair for NARAL Pro-Choice America, author and advocate on women’s issues, also formally announced that she was entering the race.

Their entry into the fray swells the Democratic field to at least five hopefuls. They join Assemblyman David Buchwald, state Sen. David Carlucci and Rockland County-based attorney Mondaire Jones seeking the party’s nomination. Last month, Chappaqua resident Jo-Anna Rodriguez-Wheeler also signaled her intention to run for the seat.

Farkas, who grew up in Chappaqua and graduated from its public schools, said her priorities is to keep the country safe from foreign interference, to stand up to President Donald Trump’s corruption and keep the American Dream alive for working families.

“I’m running for Congress because we are living in an all-hands-on-deck moment in our democracy,” Farkas said. “When Russians interfered in the 2016 election, I was among the first to sound the alarm, putting me in the crosshairs of Sean Hannity. But I haven’t backed down in my efforts to hold the President accountable for undermining our rule of law.

“I would be ready on day one to serve in the tradition of Congresswoman Lowey’s strong leadership – fighting for our corner of New York, keeping our country safe from foreign interference and helping working families strive for the American dream.”

A graduate of Franklin & Marshall College who holds a master’s from The Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University, Farkas has worked for nearly 30 years in national security circles. She was a foreign policy leader for the Defense Department, Senate Armed

P’ville Girls’ Soccer Team Captures State Title, Receives Hero’s Welcome

By Erin Maher

The Pleasantville High School girls’ soccer team made history on Sunday defeating Section 3’s Central Valley Academy, 3-2, in the final seconds to win the Class B state championship and give the team its first state title.

The Panthers (20-1-2) dominated on their way to the marquee match, not yielding a single goal since the playoffs began and shutting out four consecutive opponents.

However, for Sunday’s game, played at SUNY Cortland, the team followed a different script. The Panthers trailed Central Valley 2-0 until midway through the second half, when Panther Izzy Kapoor, assisted by Allison Portera, put Pleasantville on the board.

With three minutes remaining, Pleasantville tied the game at 2-2 on the first of two goals by junior forward Katie Moses.

Latimer Introduces Plan to Limit County Executive to Two Terms

By Martin Wilbur

County Executive George Latimer proposed on Monday limiting holders of the office to two terms to help ensure a greater balance of interest and power between the executive and legislative branches.

Under the measure that would amend the county’s 2011 law that enacted 12-year limits for both the Board of Legislators and the county executive’s seat, holders of the post would be restricted to two four-year terms. Latimer said if approved by the board and signed into law, the measure would apply to himself as well.

He said it is an important step as the executive branch continues to have enormous authority and

Latimer said that the most common limits for executive posts are eight years, which includes the governors in New Jersey and Connecticut.

“I think an eight-year period of time, given the concentration of power that belongs to the executive, it is a reasonable balance and what it does do is it turns over this position structurally more frequently,” Latimer said.

One disadvantage to limiting county executives to two terms is a greater chance of having a lame-duck incumbent, he said.

Issues that may still have to be worked out is whether an executive who takes over following an incumbent’s death or resignation should be allowed to run for up to two full terms of their own and whether to maintain a hard two-term lifetime limit for former county executives, Latimer said.

Currently, there are only two living former executives, Spano and Rob Astorino. While he does not expect Spano to run for the office again, Latimer said he would not object to a special rule that exempts Astorino.

Several county lawmakers were called to see the value in limiting the executive’s tenure. He said he has spoken to some legislators and believes there is consensus for executive posts are eight years, which includes the governors in New Jersey and Connecticut.

“I think what we’re watching now is the need for a more robust balance between the executive and the legislative branch and that’s the best way to ensure that decisions are made with the broadest possible input and with the greatest amount of thoughtfulness,” Latimer said.

The proposal is expected to be sent to the Board of Legislators this week. Latimer said he is hopeful that a majority of lawmakers will see the value in limiting the executive’s tenure. He said he has spoken to some legislators and believes there is consensus in support of the new limit, although there are those who are philosophically opposed to term limits.

Do You Have Acid Reflux Disease?

Get smart about causes, symptoms and treatment options...

Q: Do I have acid reflux disease?
A: First, let’s understand what this condition is. Your stomach produces acid in order to digest food. Normally, acid remains in your stomach, finally passing into your intestines. However, with acid reflux disease, also known as gastroesophageal reflux disease or GERD, stomach acid leaks backward and upward, “refluxing” into the esophagus.

The large spectrum of symptoms connected with acid reflux includes “heartburn,” a sharp pain in the chest from acid irritating the esophagus, or mild pain in the chest or upper belly. Both typically subside in minutes. Less common symptoms are nausea, vomiting, GI tract upset, and bloating. Severe acid reflux disease can involve regurgitating acid and stomach contents into the throat, and sometimes into the lungs. That can cause chronic coughing, pneumonia or asthma.

Q: What causes it?
A: Backward movement occurs when the valve between the stomach and esophagus—the lower esophageal sphincter, or LES—weakens. Genetics can weaken it, as can smoking, and certain foods, such as coffee, chocolate and citrus fruits. A hiatal hernia can cause acid reflux by moving the LES from your abdomen into the chest area. Long-term acid reflux can lead to Barrett’s disease, a precancerous, chronic irritation of the esophagus, which must be monitored through regular endoscopies.

Q: What are my non-surgical treatment options?
A: Many people can manage symptoms with over-the-counter medications that reduce stomach acid. It’s important to understand, however, that medications do not stop the refluxing action. All they do is reduce the amount of acid in your stomach. Because these can interact with other medicines or reduce bone density, you may not want to take them long-term. You may also find relief through lifestyle changes—avoiding coffee and chocolate, and losing weight—which can help strengthen the LES.

Q: Do I need surgery?
A: Severe acid reflux disease typically requires surgery. If you have a hiatal hernia, we fix it, and then wrap a portion of the relocated stomach to create a new strong valve. If there’s no hernia, we only create a new valve. The procedure, called a nissen fundoplication, is performed at Northern Westchester Hospital using robotic surgery. Post-surgery, there’s little chance your LES will weaken again.

Pleasantville Girls’ Soccer Team Captures State Title, Receives Hero’s Welcome

Then with four seconds left on the clock, Moses scored the game winner, securing the title for the Panthers. “It was unreal,” said Moses. “We worked together as a team and we pulled through and we never gave up. It’s amazing we made history today.”

The team had strong community support on game day. For those who couldn’t make the drive up to Cortland, a viewing party was held in the high school auditorium, organized by Pleasantville FC.

Parents, teachers and community members filled the auditorium, and sat anxiously, watching a live stream of the match. Younger players from the Pleasantville Youth Soccer Club filled the first few rows, many waving green and white rally towels.

When Moses scored with the clock winding down, the auditorium erupted in cheers and claps.

John Vamossy, co-president of the Pleasantville Youth Soccer Club, has been a part of the organization for eight years and organized the viewing party. “I’ve coached a lot of the girls on the team, they are an incredibly talented, amazing group of girls,” Vamossy said. “Cortland is three-and-a-half hours away, so it’s tough to get everyone up and everyone visiting, but we wanted to have a great community support and to show that we care about them.”

Late Sunday night, the team returned to Pleasantville to a hero’s welcome. Squad cars from the Pleasantville Police Department and fire engines from the village’s volunteer fire department escorted the bus carrying the state champions back into town. They pulled up to the high school while Queen’s “We Will Rock You” played as community members welcomed the team home.

After plenty of cheers and hugs, the team filed into the gymnasium, where Coach Chris Osterhoudt recognized each player by name.

Pleasantville High School Principal Joseph Palumbo addressed the new champions on their return home. “Take the lessons that you learned throughout the season for your next few years, apply them to all the other things you do in your life,” he said.

And, before the festivities were over, Palumbo awarded the girls one last victory before Monday morning. “There will be late passes in the office for all of you tomorrow morning,” Palumbo said.

In their march to the championship, the Panthers dethroned perennial Section 1 champion Bronxville and then ousted the defending state champs, Chenango Forks. The team also defeated Section 9’s James I. O’Neill, 4-0, in the regional final and on Saturday beat Section 5 champ Greece Olympia, also by a 4-0 margin. A parade to honor the team has been scheduled for this Sunday at 1 p.m. from Pleasantville Village Hall to the high school.

New Castle Steps Up Pressure on Utilities to Remove Double Poles

By Martin Wilbur

New Castle officials told Con Edison and Verizon representatives last week that unless all double utility poles lining the town’s roadways are removed the Town Board will advance local legislation that proposes penalties for noncompliance.

Double poles are sometimes used to shore up a weakened or weathered single pole. Since 2017, the board has been pressing the utilities to replace the unsightly poles which in many instances restricts drivers’ line of sight, making the issue a critical safety concern.

While some progress has been made, board members expressed continuing dissatisfaction that there were still about 200 double poles along New Castle roadways, according to the town’s count. However, at last Tuesday’s Town Board work session, Con Edison and Verizon representatives disputed that number, saying there are just 57 of those poles remaining among all the utilities, including Altice and Crown Castle, which provides communication infrastructure for wireless service.

“We have pictures where there’s real problems because they’re blocking the sightlines or they’re just in really bad spots, and while Con Ed has definitely made progress we have seen or we knew that some of them are still Verizon waiting for the lines to be taken off these double poles,” Councilwoman Lisa Katz said at the Nov. 12 meeting. “So we want to talk about what we can do better and if we should be executing this legislation.”

Jane Solnick, Con Edison’s director of regional affairs, said a couple of years ago there were about 500 double poles in town; since then, the utilities have heard the outcry from the town government and have been taking action.

However, there are limits to how fast the utilities can move. Kei Kurihara, engineering manager for Verizon, said if the double poles are standard poles, it would likely take each utility about a month to move its wires to another pole. If there are conduits on the pole or other complications, that time would be extended.

Despite the challenges, good headway has been made, Solnick said. Currently, Con Edison has 17 double poles and Verizon 20, with the other utilities accounting for the rest.

“At this point, we have progressed as was mentioned and we do appreciate that, working together, we did progress in bringing that number down,” she said.

Town Administrator Jill Shapiro and board members were highly skeptical of the utilities’ count. Shapiro said the town just recently counted 13 on King Street from South Greeley Avenue to Route 117.

Councilman Jeremy Saland, who proposed the local legislation, vented his frustration at the utilities. He questioned whether progress made in 2017 and again recently has been because of the threat of the legislation which carries potentially steep fines.

Under the proposed local law, any entity that is responsible for a double utility pole would be fined up to $500 a day for the first violation and up to $1,000 a day for each subsequent violation, upon conviction.

“You have to work with us,” Saland said. “We can’t constantly chase you and say ‘Do X, do Y.’ You have to take the initiative.”

He added that the utilities’ list of 57 locations of double poles does not include double poles at three of the five highest priority locations that have been compiled by the town.

Board members asked the utilities to provide a digitized list of its poles to help clear up the discrepancies between the differing numbers between the town numbers and counts from Con Edison and Verizon.

“Our own data tells us a different story,” said Councilwoman Hala Makowska. “I think that if we can agree on the facts of what’s really outstanding, then that would be the beginning of the story that we start this time and try to get it right.”
Connecticut’s Toll Plan for I-684 Fails After Two-State Backlash

By Martin Wilbur

A proposal to put a toll on the brief stretch of I-684 that crosses into and out of Connecticut appears to have fallen by the wayside after strong opposition scuttled the plan.

Connecticut Gov. Ned Lamont proposed 14 new tolls on roads throughout his state to help pay for infrastructure improvements, including the short piece of I-684 that enters and exits the extreme southwest edge of the state. But bipartisan backlash in Connecticut against the larger revenue-generating scheme has apparently sunk the idea.

Elected officials in Westchester last week had slammed the proposal to charge motorists on the 1.4 miles between the Westchester County Airport and Armonk exits. That would have disproportionately hurt New York drivers, said County Executive George Latimer.

Latimer said had the toll gained traction and gone into effect, Westchester would have gone to court to fight the state of Connecticut. “It’s basically a New York roadway,” he said. “So clever, it may be, but there’s no kind of fairness about it.”

Drivers who regularly use the heavily-traveled highway to go to the airport or to White Plains would have been severely impacted, but the municipality that might have been the most seriously affected was the Town of North Castle. Supervisor Michael Schiliro said the town could have been looking at a surge of traffic on local roads because many drivers would have likely been looking for alternative routes to avoid the toll. “We won’t have North Castle and surrounding residents paying a toll to the state of Connecticut for a stretch of road that each car is on for about 60 seconds,” Schiliro said. “Our first responders handle calls on 684 often, New York State plows and maintains the road… and we don’t ask Connecticut for a dime.”

He said Saturday that he was happy to hear that Lamont had scuttled the proposal because it would have been a protracted battle against a unified New York contingent.

State Sen. Shelley Mayer (D-Yonkers), whose district includes a large stretch of I-684 in Westchester, called it inappropriate for Lamont to have pursued the toll on that short stretch of the highway. She thanked Connecticut state legislators for their opposition to the toll plan, although Mayer cautioned that there’s no guarantee that it won’t return.

“Though I share (Lamont’s) commitment to improving road and rail infrastructure, tolling a 1.4-mile stretch of road that is predominantly used by New Yorkers and does not have on or off exits in Connecticut, is wholly inappropriate,” Mayer said.

“In addition, tolls like the one proposed for I-684 are a regressive tax on those who can least afford it. This new toll would also increase traffic on secondary roads by pushing drivers off of I-684 into surrounding communities and local roads in an effort to avoid the toll.”

Connecticut officials had not mentioned how much the toll would have cost motorists had it gone into effect.

Smash Away

What do you do with your leftover pumpkins after Halloween? Smash them, of course. More than 200 Pace University students attended the fourth annual Smashing Pumpkins/Smashing Stereotypes event on Nov. 4 organized by Pace student organizations. Students lined up to smash pumpkins with a sledgehammer after writing their most hated stereotype on it. The event was a cathartic way for students to express their distaste for stereotypes that pigeonhole people into unwanted roles.

Putnam Man Charged With DWI in Saw Mill Crash in Chappaqua

By Martin Wilbur

Westchester County police charged a Carmel man with DWI last Thursday following a head-on collision that closed the northbound lanes of the Saw Mill Parkway in Chappaqua for more than an hour.

The suspect, Martin Goudie, 54, of Gleneda Ridge, was also charged with seventh-degree criminal possession of a controlled substance. Both charges are misdemeanors.

Police said the incident occurred at 2:41 p.m. on Nov. 14 when a GMC Envoy traveling southbound on the Saw Mill near the Route 120 exit struck a guardrail, went airborne and entered the northbound lanes. The Envoy then collided head-on with a Subaru Outback.

Officers investigating the accident detected an odor of alcohol on Goudie’s breath and also observed multiple empty beer cans around the driver’s seat and front passenger seat of his car. They also found several small plastic bags in the vehicle containing a small amount of a powdery substance believed to be cocaine, police said.

Goudie was transported by ambulance to Westchester Medical Center in Valhalla, where he was admitted because of his injuries.

The driver of the Outback, Whitney Hill, 43, of Katonah, also suffered injuries and was taken to Northern Westchester Hospital in Mount Kisco. Hill was treated and released.

Police said both drivers were the only occupants of their cars.

County police responded to the scene along with volunteer ambulance corps from Chappaqua and Pleasantville.

Goudie was issued appearance tickets requiring him to answer the charges in New Castle Town Court on Nov. 21.

Pleasantville Adopts New Property Maintenance Laws

By Abby Luby

The Pleasantville Village Board last week passed two laws that will allow the municipality to more effectively deal with unsafe, abandoned and neglected properties within its jurisdiction.

The first resolution addresses changes to the existing property maintenance code to provide the village with leverage to properly maintain unsafe and deteriorating buildings and properties that pose hazardous conditions to the public.

Exterior property conditions such as the storage of debris as well as maintaining brush, grass or weeds is covered by the second resolution, which allows for local enforcement mechanisms to make sure the property conforms to the state Property Maintenance Code and the village’s standards.

“This is an existing law already on the books about unsafe structures,” said Village Administrator Eric Morrissey. “This amendment brings the law into conformity with state regulations. The village’s current code does not allow for due process.”

During the Nov. 14 public hearing, Morrissey explained that property owners will be notified that they have to take action within 30 days. If no action is taken, the property owner fails to pay, a lien will be placed against their property.

Pleasantville resident Donna Edlund was placed against their property.

Edlund also asked if that would apply to buildings and properties that might be subject to the board’s new laws that were approved by the Village Board last week.

Acting as the eyes and ears for the board, Robert Hughes alerted the board about situations to the public.

Pleasantville resident Donna Edlund was skeptical about the 30-day notices.

“Thirty days seems like a long time,” she said. “What if it snows and that (situation) changes in 30 days, they (the property owners) might not know.”

Morrissey said a clause in the law allows the building inspector to “deem it to be an emergency situation and we would take action immediately.”

Edlund also asked if that would apply to years’ worth of leaves that haven’t been removed. She was told that it would.

When snow accumulates in the winter.

Other abandoned and neglected properties might be subject to the board’s new laws that were approved by the Village Board last week.

The new property maintenance law was initially triggered by complaints from the Bedford Road School, which is near a house at 136 Manville Rd. that’s been vacant for over a year. School personnel were concerned about the safety of the students, many of whom walk by the house, especially when snow accumulates in the winter.

The new law allows for a written notice to be served by the village building inspector to the property owner that remedial work has to start within 30 days. If the owner intends to comply, the building inspector can extend the time for repairs to be made.

However, if the property owner fails or refuses to act, the village may set up boards around the building or barricade the entrances to any part of the property considered dangerous. Liens will be imposed on the property for any services performed by the village.

Last summer, Pleasantville Building Inspector Robert Hughes alerted the board about structures no longer occupied and how overgrown foliage and accumulating snow in the winter had caused safety issues. Some of the vacant properties had been foreclosed but the banks hadn’t yet taken control.

New Castle Cuts Ribbon, Celebrates Completion of Downtown Project

By Martin Wilbur

After more than two years of inconvenience and frustration, New Castle officials celebrated with Chappaqua merchants and residents last Saturday the completion of the downtown infrastructure and streetscape project.

The town held a ribbon-cutting ceremony at the new pedestrian plaza near the corner of King Street and South Greeley Avenue. The space, which includes tables and chairs for the public to sit, is one of the visible improvements throughout the downtown along with the new sidewalks, crosswalks, light fixtures, benches and trash receptacles as part of the originally estimated $11.6 million project.

But most of the project’s work and expense were the new drainage, sewage and water pipes installed during the first half of the project, said Supervisor Robert Greenstein. Greenstein thanked his Town Board colleagues, Town Hall staff and members of the Streetscape Committee for helping see the work to its conclusion.

“And, of course, thanks to the merchants and other commercial residents who endured challenges to their businesses,” Greenstein said. “They are the true foundation for our downtown.”

While there are a few odd tasks to complete, the town will now wait for the state Department of Transportation (DOT) to make the new traffic signal functional at the intersection of King Street and South Greeley Avenue. The test of the signal, he said.

The launch of DiscoverChappaqua, former New Castle councilman Adam Brodsky, surrounded by the current Town Board and Streetscape Committee members, gets ready to cut the ribbon at the new pedestrian plaza during last Saturday’s celebration.

A brief ceremony dedicating a new bench across the street from the plaza outside Chappaqua Cleaners & Tailors in memory of its former owner Tony Magnotta. Magnotta took over the business from his father in 1971 and continued to come to work to help his children in the store until his death last year.

Today, Chappaqua Cleaners & Tailors is led by his daughter, Toni Magnotta, and is celebrating 85 years in business.

“Our father left us an excellent example of how to carry on this business,” Toni Magnotta said. “He worked here seven days a week even though we were closed on Sunday. He’d come down on Sunday and worked because at the end of the day this store meant everything to him, the community meant everything to him and his customers, he absolutely loved.”

It’s difficult to be away from family at Christmastime. Thousands of American servicemen and servicewoman experience that every year.

But there will be 400 members of the U.S. military stationed overseas who will get a chance to smile just a little bit broader before Christmas because of the efforts by the children in Holy Rosary’s Religious Education Program.

Last week, the program’s 360 youngsters in grades 1-8 wrote cards and stuffed stockings full of treats and toiletries that will be brought to American Legion Post 253 in the Bronx before being shipped, said Aura Zelaya, Holy Rosary’s religious education coordinator. Last week was spent writing the cards to the service members, dividing the items and placing them in the stockings.

Zelaya said last Thursday that local veterans are also asked to come to the Hawthorne school during its annual Support Our Troops initiative to speak with the children about how important their efforts are. Mount Pleasant resident and Holy Rosary parishioner Frank Morganthaler, a member of the Marines Corps who served in Vietnam, explained to the children in several different classes that what they are doing is deeply appreciated and will make a difference in a soldier’s life.

“You’d love to be home with your family. I’m sure most of the guys over there now would love to be home with theirs but you can’t,” said Morganthaler, who missed two Christmases, one while based in California and the second in Vietnam. “You know there’s something that you have to accomplish.”

Zelaya explained to the children in her first-grade class that the men and women serving overseas are protecting the country and that’s why they can’t be home for the holiday.

Holy Rosary parishioners donated the small pieces of candy, granola bars, soap, toothpaste and toothbrushes and other items that nearly everyone takes for granted but are always welcome when serving overseas, she said.

The seemingly small gesture of those filled stockings and an accompanying card is also much-needed, Morganthaler explained. When Morganthaler served, he said he was lucky to get a small care package from home. “Just think about it if somebody told you today you couldn’t be home for Christmas, think about how that might make you feel, and that they drop you 6,000 or 10,000 miles away in a country you don’t even know,” he said. “So what you’re doing today and what you’ve been doing all week is very, very important. It makes them feel like somebody cares about them.”

The roughly 400 stockings will be brought to the Bronx in time to be part of a larger shipment that will be sent out toward the end of the first week in December, Zelaya said.

Mount Pleasant Needs to Steer Clear of Hiring Family Members

In the last six months, the Town of Mount Pleasant has now made two hires that have drawn disapproving scrutiny. Last week, the Town Board approved Supervisor Carl Fulgenzi’s son as a laborer in the Sewer and Water Department. In May, the board approved a resolution to hire three new police officers, one of them being the daughter of Chief Paul Oliva.

No one is saying the supervisor’s son, Alex Fulgenzi, or that Ms. Oliva are not qualified for the positions to which they were appointed. However, in these two instances, the son and daughter of the town’s top elected official and the police department, respectively, were hired in the towns where a parent serves in two of the most important capacities.

It raises the question about whether the board realizes that hiring a close family member exposes them to whispers of favoritism and whether strings were pulled to hire their relative over another candidate. That’s also not fair to the younger Fulgenzi or Oliva.

If this were private industry, there would obviously be no issue. Companies can hire whomever they want. But the Town of Mount Pleasant isn’t a private entity. Taxpayer money is being expended on public jobs that should go to the most qualified person on the list of those who apply for the position. The public, therefore, needs to have full confidence that that standard is adhered to and strings aren’t pulled.

In the future, Mount Pleasant, and all municipalities, must refrain from hiring close family members, particularly where a relative is in a supervisory capacity. Is that bit of common sense too much to ask for?

An Answer to Our Shortage of Psychiatrists Lies Abroad

By Dr. Laurence Dopkin

More than 40 million American adults suffer from mental illnesses like anxiety, depression and schizophrenia. Nearly six in 10 aren’t receiving treatment.

That’s often because they can’t find a mental health professional. Sixty percent of U.S. counties lack a single psychiatrist. More than 110 million Americans live in mental health professional shortage areas.

This shortfall will likely grow worse in the years to come. More than six in 10 practicing psychiatrists are nearing retirement age.

By 2024, the United States could be short between 14,000 and 31,000 psychiatrists, according to a study published in the medical journal Psychiatric Services.

International medical graduates (IMGs) can help plug this gap. These doctors — many of whom are U.S. citizens who chose to pursue their medical degrees abroad — already account for a significant share of our nation’s psychiatrists. Recruiting more of them to practice statewide would greatly improve Americans’ mental health.

One in five adults in the United States lives with a mental health condition. About 16 million people struggle with major depression, according to the National Alliance on Mental Illness. Over six million struggle with bipolar disorder. And many patients cope with multiple conditions simultaneously.

It’s becoming harder for them to find mental health specialists. California, Florida and Texas – the three most populous states in the union – have less than half the number of psychiatrists they need to meet patient demand. In rural areas, 95 percent of mental health professionals say they can’t handle their communities’ needs.

International medical graduates are well-equipped to fill these shortages. They already account for nearly one-third of our country’s psychiatrists – and roughly one-quarter of all physicians nationwide.

IMGs tend to minister to high-need populations. They account for more than 55 percent of the active psychiatry residents who specialize in adolescent and child treatment. Their work is crucial, given that 20 percent of youngsters between 13 and 18 suffer from a mental health condition.

Research shows that increased access to mental health care for our nation’s youth could help reduce suicide rates, juvenile delinquency and school dropout rates.

International medical graduates also tend to practice in high-need areas. In places where three-quarters of the population is non-white, over one-third of practicing doctors graduated from international medical schools.

Doctors trained abroad are “more willing than their U.S. medical graduate counterparts to practice in remote, rural areas,” according to a report from the American College of Physicians.

Physicians trained abroad provide top-notch care – sometimes even better than their domestically trained counterparts. A 2017 study in the BMJ, a medical journal, found that patients treated by international medical graduates had lower mortality rates than those treated by U.S. medical graduates.

This year, IMGs matched to U.S. residencies are at the highest rate since 1991. Many of these new doctors are U.S. citizens returning home to practice. More than 60 percent of Caribbean medical school graduates, for example, are U.S. citizens.

Forty graduates of the school I work at, St. George’s University in Grenada, matched into psychiatry residencies in March. They started working at hospitals across the country this summer, from Tennessee and New York to Kansas and California.

America needs thousands of additional psychiatrists to meet patient demand for mental health services. The nation should look abroad, to international medical schools, to find them.

Dr. Laurence Dopkin is a practicing psychiatrist and serves as assistant dean of students at St. George’s University (www.sgu.edu).

Fulgenzi, Mt. Pleasant Republicans’ Denial of Mailer is Shameful

While Mr. Fulgenzi works very hard in his position as Mount Pleasant town supervisor, he either has no political savvy or is in denial about the activities of his slate’s recent campaign.

Refuting his use of the official town e-mail distribution list to send out fundraiser invitations, he said, “The other board, because I received and kept the e-mail. The title of the distribution list, “Everyone Town Hall” is self-explanatory, inappropriate and unethical.”

The Mount Pleasant Republican Committee’s offer of a complimentary lunch to voters accepting their rides to the polls, was acknowledged as “a mistake.” Actually, it is a violation of election law.

Saying that no one at the Town Board had anything to do with the attack mailing that targeted me is equally questionable. The New York Republican State Committee (NYRSC) would not have taken the time to dig up statements about a local board member to distort; only board members would have led them information and helped them distort it. I further doubt that the NYRSC had anything to do with it at all. The Mount Pleasant Republican Committee could have easily printed the return address on the mailer.

When I, or anyone else, has spoken of their disgust with this mailing, shouts of “This is not town business!” by other board members are a thinly veiled attempt to silence any protest against this shameful activity.

If they truly did not know about these activities, my opponents had the opportunity to decry them, once informed. They haven’t. Once in office, they will be lumped together with the group responsible for this nefarious campaign.

Mt. Pleasant Town Board Hires Supervisor’s Son for Water Dept.

By Joan Gaylord

The Mount Pleasant Town Board voted last week to hire Supervisor Carl Fulgenzi’s son to a position in the town’s Water and Sewer Department.

Alexander Fulgenzi was approved by a 4-0 margin to fill the open position of laborer, which will pay a salary of $50,911. The supervisor recused himself from the vote.

The younger Fulgenzi, a Mount Pleasant resident, has worked for the Town of North Castle’s Water Department as a laborer. During the two years he has filled that post, he has gained experience that exceeds the responsibilities required for the position in Mount Pleasant, said Councilman Nicholas DiPaolo.

According to a memorandum from Town Engineer David Smyth that was sent to the Town Board on Nov. 1, Alex Fulgenzi also performed water sampling, pump station monitoring and emergency on-call duties in North Castle, experience that is comparable to Mount Pleasant’s maintenance worker, which is considered a higher level position.

During the public comment portion of the Nov. 12 meeting, Valhalla resident Ken Noonan asked about the procedure for gathering candidates for the Water and Sewer Department’s laborer opening.

DiPaolo responded that the department had reviewed the list of applicants for town positions. The laborer position is non-competitive and does not require the town to hire from the civil service list, he said.

Councilwoman Francesca Hagadus-McHale said she voted in favor of the resolution because she was assured the younger Fulgenzi was qualified and that there would be adequate separation from the supervisor’s office.

“THERE WILL BE FIVE LAYERS OF SUPERVISION BETWEEN ALEXANDER AND HIS FATHER,” Hagadus-McHale noted before the vote. She also mentioned that there were already enough votes from the board to approve the hire.

Alex Fulgenzi will begin his new position on Dec. 1.

Mount Pleasant Adopts $53.6M Preliminary Budget

The Mount Pleasant Town Board voted to adopt the preliminary $53.6 million 2020 town budget last week and set Nov. 26 for a public hearing on the spending plan.

Following the unanimous vote, Supervisor Carl Fulgenzi said the document would be posted to the town’s website so residents may familiarize themselves with its contents before the hearing. The budget appropriates $6.7 million for the general fund for the entire town, $19.6 million for the general fund for outside the villages and $7.4 million for the highway fund outside the villages. The spending increase currently stands at about $2.5 million over the current year.

Fulgenzi noted that the anticipated increase in the tax levy is 1.65 percent and complies with the state tax cap. The levy, the amount raised by property taxes, is about $425,000 under that threshold, according to the document.

Fulgenzi shared his initial draft with the board on Oct. 31.

Mt. Kisco Resident Takes His Place in N.J. Boxing Hall of Fame

By Martin Wilbur

Peter Wood had a difficult childhood growing up in Bergen County, N.J. It would be boxing that helped turn his life around.

It was fitting that Wood, a longtime Mount Kisco resident, received an honor last week that has also gone to some of the higher profile names in the sport, such as Chuck Wepner, Leon and Michael Spinks and Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

Last Thursday, Wood, 65, was inducted into the New Jersey Boxing Hall of Fame during the organization’s annual ceremony.

“Boxing was my Harvard and my Yale,” Wood said. “It made me a better person because boxing is so demanding. This honor, it validates all the hard work I’ve done.”

Wood was 14-1 as an amateur and was a finalist at the 1971 Golden Gloves in Madison Square Garden. He was asked to represent his country in competitions abroad, including at the 1976 Maccabean Games in Tel Aviv, and considered turning pro.

Instead, he went to college and for 30 years taught English at White Plains High School before retiring.

“By that time, I was hitting books rather than people and the need for me to get rid of my anger had evaporated,” Wood said.

But it wasn’t just his accomplishments in the ring that helped get Wood recognized. Since his long-ago days in competition, he has authored several well-received boxing books, including “Confessions of a Fighter: Battling Through the Golden Gloves” and “A Clenched Fist: The Making of a Golden Gloves Champion” and has written for Ring and Boxing Illustrated, among many other publications.

Wood said some people don’t understand his attraction to boxing. He acknowledges that it’s a wild, chaotic and bloody sport that have left some of his boxing buddies in poor physical shape as they age.

However, at about 15 years old, suffering from low self-esteem and filled with anger, Wood turned to the sport that wound up being his salvation. Despite the scars, broken bones, cut eyes and broken hand from training and competing, he said “boxing was my medicine.”

“It was chaos, controlled chaos and kind of smoothed things out for me,” Wood said. “There’s sparks of electricity in the ring, especially when you’re in the ring. It was great, and ironically, boxing was a place of healing for me.”

Wood is also in the midst of coming up for ideas for future books.

He said it was a thrill to be in the presence of others last Thursday evening who helped contribute to the sport that helped him get his life together, as well as seeing people he hadn’t caught up to in years.

“Many old friends, new friends, fans, ex-world champions, contenders, writers, cameras and proud families were there,” Wood said. “And not one punch was thrown all night.”

Screening of ‘The Biggest Little Farm” Nov. 22 in Chappaqua

The Chappaqua Public Library will present a free screening of the documentary film “The Biggest Little Farm” on Friday, Nov. 22, from 7 to 9:30 p.m. at the Chappaqua Performing Arts Center, located at 480 Bedford Rd. in Chappaqua.

Before the screening, guest speaker Allison Turcan, founder of D.I.G. Farm in North Salem and host and producer of the podcast “Getting Dirty,” will discuss what it takes to be a local farmer.

“The Biggest Little Farm” chronicles the eight-year quest of John and Molly Chester as they trade city living for 200 acres of barren farmland and dream to harvest in harmony with nature. Through various hardships and a vast learning curve, they embrace opportunities provided by nature’s conflicts. With the help of biodynamic expert Alan York, they uncover a biodiverse design of living that exists beyond the farm.

The event is free and open to the public. For more information, visit chappaquailibrary.org or contact the New Castle Sustainability Advisory Board at sab@mynewcastle.org.
The latest step in the evolution of Grand Prix New York was unveiled last Thursday as the Mount Kisco entertainment center opened its ninja course and newly-installed multilevel go-kart racetrack.

Bill Diamond, of Diamond Properties, which owns the sprawling complex at 333 N. Bedford Rd. where Grand Prix is located, said being allowed by the village to refresh the facility and offer different and changing experiences as needed has been helpful to the operation and to Mount Kisco.

“What really makes a town these days is services and the experiences your community can enjoy in that town,” Diamond said. “We wanted to build something that was just going to be a spectacular experience.”

The ninja course, housed in a 15,000-square-foot area referred to as Grand Prix Extreme Play, offers a variety of wall and tower climbing, obstacle courses and a zipline. The area where each of the activities is offered is fully padded and is suitable for children, teens and adults.

On the racing side, the changes include a brand-new multilevel track that Diamond called “probably one of the most exciting go-kart tracks in the country.” With the new track, Grand Prix also has introduced fully electric go-karts, putting an end to the use of gas-powered vehicles.

“It allows for a better customer experience with the elimination of the gas and the fumes,” Diamond said.

While Diamond said he’s been a fan of the ninja concept, by adding the Extreme Play along with the improved racing to the 120,000-square-foot facility, he hopes a wider variety of audiences will find Grand Prix appealing. It also houses a bowling alley, virtual reality gaming and traditional arcade games and a restaurant and bar.

“We’re trying to hit all ages,” he said. “I think it’s going to be incredibly popular. “Grand Prix was an amazing facility 10 years ago when it finally opened, and what I think is going to happen is this will bring a whole new life to the venue.”

Mount Kisco Mayor Gina Picinich said Diamond Properties built a first-rate facility, and better yet, the company also gives back to the community.

“Bill and Jim Diamond have constantly pushed the boundaries and thought beyond what is to what could be,” Picinich said. “They’ve challenged us as a village and they challenged themselves, so what you see here has been turned from a warehouse to the premiere entertainment location in Westchester County, which is truly, truly an extraordinary, extraordinary story.”
One of my most important jobs before listing a property is to help my sellers prepare their homes for showing to prospective buyers. I was reminded during a recent presentation at my William Raveis office by home stager Susan Atwell who recommended engaging a home stager. Why? Because nobody can look at their homes objectively, even someone who’s been in the business a long time.

Atwell didn’t plan a career as a home stager. An English major in college, her true passions were science and math. After a few years in the business world, her love for logic first evolved into a successful career as a computer scientist. In college, her true passions were science and math. After a few years in the business world, her love for logic first evolved into a successful career as a computer scientist.

So when she first heard that staged homes sell faster, it seemed to make sense. But she still wondered, how do they really know? In her mind, she figured there’s only one way to prove that home staging works, and that’s scientifically.

At her recent presentation, she said, “To perform this scientific experiment, it would be necessary to take two identical homes, one staged (or decorated to sell), one un-staged. Everything else being equal – the home’s location, its price and promotion to potential buyers – and then see which one sells faster.

“But, since we know this isn’t really possible, we can still devise a comparable strategy. Not one that we recommend, of course, but one that many home sellers unwittingly end up trying.”

Regardless, she stated, this technique will still prove true if staged homes really do sell faster than un-staged homes.

Here are the steps:

First, attempt to sell a home "as is." Then wait and see what happens. If there is no sale, stage the home. Clean, declutter, put away personal items, freshen up paint, add lighting, update bedding, remove old window treatments, put out fresh towels – anything that will show off your home’s best features while making it feel both inviting and move-in ready.

Once staged, wait an equal amount of time, or until the home finally sells. Compare how long it takes to sell.

Atwell said that she unwittingly performed this experiment some years ago with a friend whose home was on the market for nine months with no sale and no offers. The market was beginning to cool, but when the home was originally listed, the market was still hot – proving that even in the best markets, some homes won’t sell “as is.”

Its total transformation cost less than 1 percent of the listing price, Atwell said. Once staged, the home sold in just two months, with multiple offers and the beginnings of a bidding war. At the time the home was listed, there was a seven-month inventory of homes glutting the market. This means that under normal or average conditions, this home would not be expected to sell for at least seven months. Staging lowered that time to two months.

Even with her passion for decorating – and her acknowledged addiction to home staging television shows – it wasn’t until Atwell saw firsthand the impact staging had that she was truly convinced that it worked.

The Real Estate Staging Association (RESA) has used a similar approach – but on a much larger scale – to prove that home staging is effective.

Each year RESA compiles a report based on feedback submitted by hundreds of home stagers around the United States. Here’s what they found in 2011:

--RESA studied 174 homes that were previously on the market for an average of 156 days before the homeowners gave up trying to sell on their own and called in a professional home stager. Those same homes were staged, relisted and sold on average in 42 days, a 73 percent reduction in time on the market.

--RESA also studied 410 homes that were staged before they went on the market and sold in 42 days on average. The study concluded that it doesn’t benefit the homeowener to list the property first to see if it will sell.

So even if a home hasn’t been staged yet, Atwell said that’s okay because evidence shows that it’s never too late.

There are two variables not taken into account in RESA’s study. It is not known if the asking price was adjusted or if the same real estate agent was used throughout the selling process. The influence of either could be significant.

It is also possible that anxious home sellers are not only more willing to properly prepare their home for sale, but may also be more willing to price the home to sell because there is no amount of staging or marketing that can make up for an excessive asking price.

Don’t forget that even if a homeowner is planning to dwell rather than sell, there are great benefits to engaging a home stager for better utilization of space, furnishings and décor.

Taking the Time to Slow Down in a Fast-Paced World

We were welcomed by the all-too-familiar aroma – a heavenly mix of fresh rye bread, roast beef and smoky bacon – and the usual lunchtime clamor. It was 12:50 p.m. on a Tuesday and the popular village deli was packed. As I rummaged through my wallet to pay for my usual, I looked over at my friend who was waiting by the door. She gave me an enthusiastic thumbs up and said, “Hey, as long as you have those chicken nuggets, you’re happy.”

This small interaction got me thinking about the word happiness and what it entails. It’s funny how it’s so simple, a basic human emotion, and yet the concept itself is fuzzy and obscure. As I considered the people, places and objects that contribute to my own sense of joy, I remembered a method Gretchen Rubin, author of “The Happiness Project,” followed: discovering happiness through an encounter. The encounter adds to our own narratives. So why don’t we take the time to enjoy them?

Perhaps our struggle to find happiness comes from a distorted view on the way we’re supposed to live amid an age of growing technology and sophistication. With a fast-paced society and high value placed on productivity, it’s difficult to slow down and make time for oneself.

As Klaus Schwab, founder and executive chairman of the World Economic Forum, once said in a speech at the World Government Summit in 2015, “In the new world, it is not the big fish that eats the small fish, it is the fast fish that eats the slow fish.”

Many people, including myself, fall into this description. We focus on the “bigger picture,” rushing toward elusive goals in hopes of finding satisfaction in the end result. But what if we stopped focusing on the final destination? What if we turned our attention to the little things along the way? Each person’s life is one large story, but within each story lies individual chapters, pages full of single letters and characters. In the same way each word crafts a book, every small moment we encounter adds to our own narratives. So why don’t we take the time to enjoy them?

That isn’t to say happiness doesn’t have to be complex, and it certainly doesn’t have to be one immense thing. Maybe it’s sitting outside and relishing an autumn day, reflecting on the beauty of the world around you. Or maybe it’s as simple as $3 and a plate of chicken nuggets. Try to take the time to slow down and let your mind become silent – and give yourself room to listen to your own heart. Ellie Dessart is a senior at Bronxville High School. Her monthly column “Inside the Mind of a Teen” examines and addresses the issues pertaining to teenagers at both the local and global level.

Finding Traces of Your Roots in the Strangest Places

I said hello to my Viking ancestor the other day in the strangest of places – a doctor’s office, where I had gone with a hand complaint.

While many people of Irish extraction carry Viking blood, few are able to trace it back to any single person. I certainly can’t. But there are the telltale signs of Viking blood – a red beard, when all else is brown. I’ve got that one, though the majority of the hairs on my head and face have now turned a stately grey, if not outright silver.

A stubborn streak, yes; love of stories and storytelling – most definitely. Ancestry.com confirmed that I am a whopping 2 percent Scandinavian. I thought or it would be more, perhaps a quarter. But who can argue with science? I’ll take whatever I can lay claim to of a connection with these fascinating people.

The Vikings landed in Iceland in 795, sacking a monastery on Rathlin Island. For the next few hundred years, they sacked and pillaged these centers of learning. Why? Monastic centers were targeted because they were where the gold and precious jewels were stored, the first in the form of chalices and candleholders and saints’ reliquaries, the latter often adorning beautifully hand-scripted books capturing the gospels and other religious as well as secular texts.

A classic Viking longboat, slicing the ocean’s waves on a journey of adventure.

Lightheartedly – at least in the beginning – the monasteries also provided an easy source of slaves to be carried back to the jarldoms of Scandinavia – modern day Norway, Sweden, Finland and Denmark. Ironically, the pressure these marauders placed upon the Irish monasteries caused a large number of learned monks to migrate to the courts of continental European kings and princes, where they established centers of learning that lasted many centuries beyond the Vikings, with enormous benefit to the survival of western civilization.

Viking raids continued unabated for almost 300 years, but in between these adventurous souls decided to settle down in the Emerald Isle, and began carving out kingdoms of their own, just as they were doing in Scotland, England, France and countless other realms of Europe.

Viking raids continued unabated for almost 300 years, but in between these adventurous souls decided to settle down in the Emerald Isle, and began carving out kingdoms of their own, just as they were doing in Scotland, England, France and countless other realms of Europe. And the native Irish and their would-be conquerors settled down to an uneasy peace, disturbed every so often by raids and counterraid backs and forth across the shifting borders of Viking and Gael.

When they were finally defeated by an unlikely coalition under Brian Boromhie (more commonly rendered as Boru) at the Battle of Clontarf in 1014, the Vikings had left a permanent mark on Ireland, not all of it a tale of destruction. They opened the country to trade. With their fleets of longboats, the Vikings not only sought to conquer lands, but to conquer markets as well. They brought a concept previously unknown to the largely nomadic Celtic tribes of Ireland.

Every Irish town or city or bit of Viking in origin; Dublin as well, though there’s no trace of a fjord there. There is, instead, the memory of a “black pool,” or dubh linn, where the Vikings set up shop.

They also left genetics, some of which are afflictions among the Irish to this day. Hemochromatosis, high iron levels in the blood, is one of those. Haven’t got that! Another is Dupuytren disease, also called Viking’s hand, which first manifests itself as an annoying bean-size lump under the skin of one’s palm. It is a slowly progressing condition of the hand where certain tissues begin to constrict.

Once present, it can either stabilize or progress over time beyond mere annoyance into something more serious. A few months ago, I found the first telltale signs of my Viking ancestor, who I will affectionately call Ragnar, after the chief character in the History Channel series “Vikings.” And with that genetic memory of an ancestor long dead, I am happy to peacefully coexist. Just glad it’s my left, and not my sword hand!

As Arthur spirals down a path of cruelty and violence, this gritty character study fully embraces the darkness of its villain in a shocking and unsettling way. Dementia Care: Six Tips to Make Dementia Gentler on Everyone

When Robert Harris was 80 years old, he began to experience dementia. Suddenly he became his 79-year-old wife of having an affair. The notion was so real to him and his fury so great, that Robert became violent.

The typical treatment for disruptive dementia-related behavior is medication to sedate the person. But the drugs normally used carry extreme medical risks for the elderly. While what does it mean? What are the effects? What can happen with dementia? Instead, you are managing some of the symptoms using the lowest effective dose of medication while helping the person maintain quality of life, dignity and caring relationships.

After the cognitive downside, a person will arrive at a new normal that’s different from the way they used to be. Though this is a difficult process for the person and caregivers, it is important to accept that new person.

Understanding why someone acts out helps you address those needs. In dementia, remote memories remain but new memories are eroded. So the person sees a confused landscape that they’re increasingly unable to navigate. In response, they can become agitated and overwhelmed. Some retreat into silence. Others become aggressive, even violent.

Such a person can feel: “I don’t know what I need or how to ask for it. Once I have what I need, I can relax. But if I never get it, I can never relax.”

3. Maintain a daily routine

The antidote to an unfamiliar, threatening world is to maintain daily routines and structure, along with purpose. A routine can be short walks at the same time of the day. Dressing and eating at certain times give the day structure. Helping a person request specific meals and giving them small tasks empowers them.

4. Participate more, correct less

Many people with dementia express beliefs that are factually wrong. These can amplify into paranoid delusions that are extremely distressing, such as a daughter planning to steal their wealth. You’ll feel tempted to correct them, to explain things logically, to present evidence to the contrary. But the more you try to counter the belief, the more fixed it can become and the more agitated the person can grow.

Instead, shift to listening and distracting. Something as simple as “Let’s go to the kitchen to check on lunch” can work.

5. Talk about the distant past

As insight, judgment, logic and understanding of the environment becomes increasingly impaired, confusion over time and place can also occur. Daily, a person may insist, “I need to leave now. I need to go to work.” Rather than replying, “But you retired 20 years ago,” enter into their world by talking about their job, perhaps a memory from years ago – the more distant, the better-remembered. There is comfort in talking about the past.

6. Tolerate your own distress

“Yes, but he’s withdrawing…” or “Is she unhappy?” are typical anguished reactions. The reality is that dementia is a journey for the person going through it and for the caregiver. And there are calming, loving behavioral techniques that make it gentler for everyone.

A Formula for an Intimate Tasting Event at Home

I’m sure many of you have participated in wine tastings at fundraising events and/or at your local wine shop. Why not enjoy a similar event in the privacy of your own home with family and friends?

A winetasting evening can be simple or elaborate, elemental or complex, informal or highly organized. Whichever route you take, it is always going to be fun. Consuming wine with family and friends seems to have a universal effect of conviviality.

Here are a few tips on planning and structuring an at-home wine tasting.

1. Decide on a theme.

It can be a specific varietal, a specific region or a combination of the two. Limit your individual wine selections to five or six wines. If you’re planning to offer additional pourings of wines after the tasting session, purchase an additional bottle of each wine to be enjoyed by all.

Typically select wines in the $10 to $15 price range, but also throw in a $9 bottle and a $30 bottle in order to evaluate differences in style and appeal of wines at opposite ends of the price spectrum.

2. Set up the tasting area.

You’ll need appropriate glassware. For informal tastings, almost any stemware will do. If you want to be more formal, select the appropriate glass shape for whites (tall and slender) and for reds (rounded bowl and more squat).

Next, fashion some sort of scorekeeping sheet, either individual cards for guests to write notes and scores (a 1-10 scoring scale is sufficient) or a master sheet kept by the host to record verbal evaluations by each guest.

3. Taste the wines.

Yes, there is a preferred way to experience wines. These simple steps apply at your tasting event as well as when you order wine at a restaurant.

Follow this “5 S Steps” sequence.

SIGHT: The color and viscosity of the wine will set up your expectations of the wine. Light, clear color typically equates to softer, less acidic styles of wine. Darker, opaque color typically equates to robust, more acidic styles of wine.

SWIRL: Holding the base of the glass on the table, move the glass in a circular motion. This step opens up the wine from its cramped quarters in the bottle and allows it to breathe, which brings out the bouquet and aromas of the wine.

SMELL: Go ahead, don’t be reluctant to stick your nose into the glass to experience the sensory characteristics of the wine. After all, it is your sense of smell, with its 10,000 components, that determines your opinion of a wine.

SIP: Take a sip of wine and note how it initially feels on your palate. This is when your sense of taste comes into play (sweet, sour, salty, bitter, umami).

SWALLOW OR SPIT: When you swallow, the intensity of the wine – the “finish” – is experienced, as the wine passes through the rear of your mouth, where your bitter sensory taste buds reside. This will help you determine the acidic levels of the wine. Of course, by this fifth step, you’ve experienced 90 percent of the style and characteristics of the wine, so don’t think it’s inappropriate to spit the wine into a spittoon.

4. Evaluate the wines.

As I note above, this can be recorded by each guest or by the hosts. At the end of the tasting, compare evaluations. It’s quite normal for one of the wines to stand out as the worst in class; it’s not so normal for one to stand out as best in class. If you enjoy a particular wine but it doesn’t seem to be consensus opinion, don’t fret. Go out and buy a case of that wine.

Wine tastings are an efficient way for you to develop and understand your wine palate. A side benefit is that you are likely to discover a wine that will become your new favorite – until the next tasting event.

By Andy Jacobs

The Valhalla football team continues to grow up right before our very eyes.

Playing with poise and purpose that seems to increase by the week, the Vikings took control in the first half on Friday night with a pair of big touchdown plays and went on to a 19-8 victory over Section 9 champion Chester Academy in a state regional Class C final at Dietz Stadium in Kingston.

“It’s just amazing. It gets more amazing each week, what these kids do,” said Vikings head coach Stephen Boyer after watching his team win for the eighth consecutive time following its 0-2 start. “The kids did great. We didn’t have many penalties. We scored early on them and I think we just took the wind out of their sails.”

Mahari Davis Jr. scored on a 47-yard pass play on the Vikings’ second possession of the evening and later tossed a 31-yard touchdown pass on an option play to a wide-open Sammy Mussuto, staking Valhalla to a 14-0 lead that its ever-improving defense was not about to relinquish.

Chester had scored six touchdowns in trouncing the host Vikings when they met in the season opener back in early September. But this time, with the stakes much higher, Valhalla’s defense rose to the challenge and kept the Hambletonians off the scoreboard until late in the final quarter.

“Defensively, they were all over the field today,” said Boyer. “Our secondary played great. Our goal was to contain and put a lot of pressure on the quarterback, and I think we did throughout the whole game. Coach (John) Consorti did a great job with our defense and we are moving on.”

For a few moments early in the contest, though, it seemed Chester might have the same kind of success it had the first time around. Running back Jacob Angeles burst up the middle 53 yards all the way to the Viking 14-yard-line on the Hambletonians’ second play from scrimmage. But a couple of penalties stalled their drive and Valhalla eventually took over on downs.

The Vikings wound up moving the football 69 yards in four plays, the last 47 coming when quarterback Michael Dawson tossed a short pass to the left to Davis, who deked one defender, then another, and raced down the left sideline for a touchdown. The point-after kick from Elias Gonzalez gave Valhalla a 7-0 lead with 5:07 remaining in the first quarter.

“Once we got that touchdown,” said Dawson, “we knew this was gonna be a different game.”

On the final play of the first quarter, Chester quarterback Joe Battiato connected on a 37-yard pass play to Kevin Stein down to the Valhalla 40. But once again, the Hambletonian threat was thwarted by penalties. Just past the midway point of the second period, a poor snap during a Chester punt gave the ball to the Vikings at the Hambletonian 31-yard-line.

On first down, the ball was handed to Davis, who then threw it down the right side of the field to Mussuto, standing in the secondary all by himself. The Vikings’ second touchdown of the night was followed by another Gonzalez PAT, stretching the lead to 14-0 with 5:47 left in the half.

Another Chester second-quarter threat fizzled when the Vikings’ Joe O’Neill recovered a fumble at the Valhalla 31-yard-line. The Vikings later took possession of the ball again at the Hambletonian 43 with just 45 seconds left before halftime.

A 23-yard pass from Dawson to Mussuto, followed immediately by a 10-yard pass to Daniel Tammaro, set the stage for a 32-yard field goal by Gonzalez on the final play of the half that gave Valhalla a 17-0 cushion.

“That was awesome. That was great,” said Boyer about the three points Gonzalez provided just before intermission. “I mean, we just barely missed two plays in the end zone. We got pushed out of bounds. But we have a weapon in Elias Gonzalez. So that made it a three-score game. That was very important.”

The second half began with Chester moving the ball all the way to the Vikings’ 5-yard-line. But two running plays went nowhere and then the southpaw Battiato, who was pressured into a 12-for-40 passing night, threw consecutive incompletion that ended the drive.

More frustration awaited the Hambletonians late in the quarter after punt returner Alex Buchanan was swarmed by the Valhalla defense and tackled at the Chester 9-yard-line. Battiato was sacked for a six-yard loss on first down, then brought down in the end zone on the next play for a safety. With just over a minute left in the period, the Vikings’ lead was up to 19 points.

“Yeah, the defense did great today,” said Dawson. “Coach Soup (Consorti) added a bunch of new schemes and it all worked out. He’s a great defensive coordinator.”

With his team’s state title hopes quickly fading early in the fourth quarter, Battiato threw a screen pass on third-and-10 to Angeles, who turned it into a 64-yard pickup. But the Hambletonians got no closer than the Vikings’ 12-yard-line, and four incomplete passes, along with a big penalty, stopped them again.

They finally managed to get on the scoreboard with four minutes remaining after Battiato, on a fourth-and-10 play, passed over the middle to Jacob Delgado, who ran for an 80-yard gain to the 2-yard line. One play later, Stein ran in for the Hambletonian touchdown. He then tossed to Battiato for the two-point conversion.

Unfortunately for Chester, the ensuing onside kick was controlled by the Vikings. When the Hambletonians did get the ball back again, there was just 2:09 left on the clock. Battiato threw four more passes that fell incomplete, the last one under heavy pressure, and then the Vikings’ Dawson, named the offensive most valuable player for the second week in a row, took a knee three straight times to run out the clock.

“It feels great,” said Dawson, asked about winning another MVP award, “but it wouldn’t be like this if I didn’t have the athletes on the outside and the good offensive line.”

The Vikings, winless after their first two games and fortunate to beat Highland on the road in overtime in week three of the season, are now just two victories away from a state championship.

“I wouldn’t say it’s crazy because I knew this team had it in them,” said Dawson. “Once we got that win (at Highland), we wanted more and we just kept on going.”

Next for the Vikings comes a state semifinal matchup against Section 10’s Gouverneur at Middletown’s Faller Field this coming Saturday, with a noon kickoff. The Wildcats are 10-0 this season and have scored at least 42 points in seven of their games.

For the Vikings, it might be a bit hard to comprehend how far they’ve come since that overtime win at Highland turned the season around.

“Amazing,” said Boyer. “Little did we know back then that we’d be in the regional finals here. Basically, we had lost nine games in a row from back to last year. So we just kind of saw what it takes to win and I think the kids have continued that. They had to learn how to win. We know how to win right now. It’s kind of like a dream, we just keep going.”

Pace Basketball Team Hoping to Build on Early Success

By Andy Jacobs

It’s been quite a while since the Pace men’s basketball team began a season with three consecutive victories.

How long exactly?

Well, the last time it happened, all the way back in 2003, LeBron James was a rookie with the Cavaliers shooting a career-worst 42 percent from the field, Eli Manning still hadn’t entered the NFL, Aaron Judge and Pete Alonso were hitting their homers in Little League uniforms and Rafael Nadal hadn’t yet won the first of his 12 French Open titles.

But on Saturday afternoon inside the Goldstein Fitness Center, the Setters finally did what their 15 most recent predecessors couldn’t. With a 97-55 rout of visiting Concordia College, Pace improved to 3-0 while providing fans with a glimpse of its solid returning core and a couple of promising freshmen.

Peyton Wejnert and Brandon Jacobs both finished with 18 points and newcomer Bryan Powell continued to impress with 15 points and 11 rebounds as the Setters used a dominant second half to break open a game that was close for the first 20 minutes.

“It think we’ve established an identity here the last couple of years,” said Setter head coach Matt Healing shortly after witnessing the most lopsided win by a Pace team in 28 years. “When I first took over, we were kind of trying to find ourselves a little bit. And now, with some guys that have played together for a couple years and the continuity of that, I think fans can expect us to play tough, play hard.”

Making their home debut following double-digit wins in their opening two games, the Setters found themselves trailing Concordia 9-5 just four minutes into the game. But a 12-0 burst highlighted by seven points from Powell, the 6-foot-6 freshman forward already averaging a double-double in his first week of college ball, quickly gave Pace a lead it never lost again.

The Clippers were still within 36-26 at halftime, but Pace opened the second half with an 18-4 spurt over the first five and a half minutes. Eight of the points came from Wejnert, and obviously he’s a special player and does a great job, but to have two young guys like Powell and Adams just playing and rebounding and just being where they’re at from a maturity and physicality standpoint is impressive already.

The Clippers were still within 36-26 at halftime, but Pace opened the second half with an 18-4 spurt over the first five and a half minutes. Eight of the points came from Wejnert, a 6-7 senior forward who led the team in scoring and rebounding a year ago.

It was really about just sharing the ball,” said Healing, back in his fifth season at the Setter helm. “I thought the ball was sticking to Wejnert, and obviously he’s a special player and does a great job, but to have two young guys like Powell and Adams just playing and rebounding and just being where they’re at from a maturity and physicality standpoint is impressive already.

With the Setters’ first conference game just a few days away, Healing is hoping his team’s best start in more than 15 years will carry over for a while.

“We’re excited to get it going, so we like where we are right now,” he said. “Obviously with our league it’s challenging every night. But we’re excited for the challenge. A little loftier goals this year with a little more edge and experience on this team.”
