Mount Kisco Selects Developers for Downtown Mixed-Use Projects

Village Signs Letter of Intent to Enter 99-Year Lease

By Joan Gaylord

The Mount Kisco Village Board drew one step closer to bringing new mixed-use development to downtown by approving two developers and an architectural firm for the project.

Trustees voted 4-1 to sign a letter of intent to potentially enter a 99-year lease with New York City-based Gotham Organization, Inc. and Charter Realty & Development of Greenwich, Conn. to develop a project called Kirby Commons.

The development would take place on the current parking lots on South Moger and North Moger avenues. Beyer, Blinder and Belle would be the architect.

The firms were selected from a Request for Proposal process that was opened earlier this year. Last week’s action allows the village to publicly disclose the firms they hope to work with.

The issue of using municipal-owned property to help re-energize downtown was one of the key pieces in the updated Comprehensive Plan that was adopted last winter. However, Mayor Gina Picinich cautioned that this is only a first step.

“It’s an extraordinary offering that doesn’t exist across northern Westchester and it doesn’t exist in Mount Kisco, so it’s

Westlake Athletic Field Upgrades Could Be Put to Vote By Spring

By Ed Perratore

The Mount Pleasant Board of Education has heard, loud and clear, community complaints about the dismal condition of its high school’s and middle school’s athletic fields – and has sketched out the necessary steps to improve them.

Superintendent of Schools Dr. Kurtis Kotes sent out a Nov. 15 letter to the community detailing the next steps to be taken toward establishing goals to put a referendum on the ballot. He wrote in correspondence that he anticipated that the Mount Pleasant School District’s athletic facilities could be in line for an upgrade.

P’ville’s Depew St. Project Removes Retail to Limit Buffer Incursion

By Abby Luby

New plans for the proposed Depew Street project were presented to the Pleasantville Planning Commission last week that responded to the board’s request to reduce incursion into the nearby wetlands buffer.

Architect Philip Fruchter of Papp Architects in White Plains showed the board several renderings that exclude the 4,500-square-foot retail component on the ground floor. The new building is pulled back from the small pocket wetland just to the north.

The new plan places the building as close as 20 feet away from the wetlands; however, the village’s wetlands regulations stipulate a 50-foot buffer requirement. The commission had asked developer David Mann of Lighthouse Enterprises in White Plains to redesign the building so the footprint would fall outside the triangular-a unique opportunity for housing and it’s a unique opportunity to fill a hole that really needs filling in our community and in northern Westchester," Picinich said.

She said the action taken at the board’s Nov. 18 meeting is not a lease or an agreement but “a declaration that we have picked the partners we would like to work with.”

Village Attorney Whitney Singleton said the next step would be to formalize the process. Representatives from the firms that have been selected will need to do their due diligence, including obtaining a site access agreement and providing financial information to the village, she said.

No financial terms were discussed or released by the village last week.

The preliminary proposal would call for 51,600 square feet of ground-floor retail space and 217 rental units, with 15 of those units reserved for tenants earning 90 percent of area median income.

The South Moger Avenue lot building would be four stories, contain 113 residences, 38,000 square feet of retail space, 368 parking spaces and various amenities for residents.

The building on the North Moger Avenue
lot would be five stories with 104 units, 13,600 square feet of retail, 522 parking spaces, a 3,100-square-foot community facility for cultural events, rooftop green space and residential amenities. The new buildings would be constructed of brick, wood and metal.

Parking would be in multilevel garages in portions of the existing lots and include 336 spaces for commuters.

Calling the proposal “a huge leap forward,” Trustee Peter Grunthal said the project would bring new vitality to the village and help stop what he called the revolving door of businesses in town.
Mount Kisco has been plagued with large swaths of empty storefronts, although most recently the vacancy rate has been declining.

“This offers the potential for tremendous economic development,” Grunthal said.

Trustee Karen Schleimer, who heavily criticized development of the parking lots at the time of the Comprehensive Plan adoption, cast the dissenting vote.
She blasted the process, which she said was “rushed,” and that there was a lack of attention to detail, especially parking.
She said it appeared that the village would need to maintain the parking facilities.

“This will change the face of Mount Kisco forever,” Schleimer said. “We can’t afford to get it wrong.”

Picinich said the apartments would offer “quality rentals” that are currently missing in the northern Westchester market. She said there would be four types of units in the South Moger Avenue building – one-and two-bedroom apartments and one and two bedrooms with dens ranging from 800 to 1,340 square feet. The North Moger building would contain studios and one-and two-bedroom units that are slightly smaller.

Projected market-rate monthly rents would be between $2,667 and $4,355 on the South Moger site and from $1,880 to $3,160 for the North Moger building.
Gotham Organization, Inc. has built about 35,000 apartments, mostly in New York City.
Newest Candidate Jumps Into 17th Congressional District Race

By Martin Wilbur

Another candidate has entered the race for the Democratic nomination in the 17th Congressional District.

Chappaqua resident Adam Schleifer, most recently an assistant U.S. attorney prosecuting fraud cases, announced his candidacy to succeed Rep. Nita Lowey for the seat. Lowey will be retiring at the end of her current term.

A product of the Chappaqua School District, Schleifer helped represent the government in the college admissions scandal that broke earlier this year.

“I have battled predatory lenders and fraudsters, those who have tried to cut the line and get ahead of hardworking families, criminals that flood our streets with dangerous weapons, and those who think their profits are more important than the health of our children and our planet,” Schleifer said through a prepared statement.

After graduating Horace Greeley High School, he earned a degree in philosophy and government at Cornell University and went on to Columbia Law School. Schleifer served as a federal law clerk then went to work as a litigator for Wachtell Lipton, Manhattan law firm.

Before serving in the U.S. attorney’s office, he was a special associate counsel for the New York State Department of Financial Services where he helped investigate and lead enforcement efforts against predatory lending practices.

Schleifer, 38, jumps into a crowded field of Democratic hopefuls to succeed Rep. Nita Lowey.

He joins Assemblyman David Buchwald (D-White Plains); state Sen. David Carlucci (D-Clarkstown); Mondaire Jones an attorney from Rockland County; former Obama administration official Evelyn Parkas, also a Chappaqua resident and Horace Greeley graduate; and Sleepy Hollow resident Allison Fine.

All of the candidates that have entered the race have lauded Lowey’s contribution to the district in her 16-term career.

However, on Monday, Jones, the only candidate who entered the field before Lowey announced her retirement on Oct. 10, blasted Schleifer’s emergence into the race, arguing that neither the country nor the 17th Congressional District needs more millionaires or billionaires. Jones called the newest candidate for being the son of Regeneron founder and CEO Howard Schleifer.

He said that it’s “surreal that a billionaire from California thinks he can buy this election” when the country needs to address issues such as student debt.

“Adam Schleifer was raised by a father worth $1.4 billion. I was raised by a single mom who needed to work multiple jobs to provide for our family, even as we relied on food stamps and Section 8 housing,” Jones said.

The congressional primary will be held next June.

Federal prosecutor Adam Schleifer, a Chappaqua resident, announced Monday he is joining the field of Democratic hopefuls to succeed Rep. Nita Lowey.

considered substandard and embarrassing, the condition of the athletic fields, which they School last January, residents decried the what that work will look like,” he added. December, we’ll be able to codify exactly there.

The Planning Commission had previously suggested removing the retail because it wouldn’t be viable in the predominantly residential area.

The original plan called for 4,500 square feet of commercial space on the first floor and 73 apartments. Under the original design, the three-story building would have had 11 studio apartments, 49 one-bedroom units and 13 two-bedroom units upstairs. The new plan has 74 units but several of those are smaller.

The commission had also requested the units have terraces to give the building a townhouse feel.

“The building is smaller and six units have been affected by pulling the building back,” said Fruchter, who showed the commission a rendering of the structure with terraces. “We’ve reduced the square footage by creating these terraces.” Attorney Kate Roberts of Zarin & Steinmetz, representing the applicant, further explained the changes.

“The units themselves got smaller but 74 units makes this [project] financially feasible,” Roberts said. “It’s the amount the client needs to make this project work.”

Klein said he still wanted to see space between the edge of the building and the wetlands buffer, perhaps as much as 20 feet.

“What I was looking for was the building to be tapered off at the corner,” he said. “The goal is to reduce the impact on the buffer and the northwest corner of the building is at issue.”

But Mann said that kind of change would be too costly.

“And it would not be marketable,” he said.

Mann said the plan also eliminates second-floor amenities in the newly-configured building.

Previous revised building designs that Mann considered less marketable and the costly cleanup of the petroleum-contaminated soil, likely a result of the LaDuca auto repair shop that had been at the site, has created what Mann said are “hardship issues.”

In June, the Planning Commission requested that the financial information be put into writing and provided to the commission for review. Klein again asked for that material.

“We require a financial analysis to demonstrate the hardship and we’ve asked for that but have yet to receive it,” he said.

Because retail space is no longer part of the project, the application needs to be reviewed by the Pleasantville Zoning Board of Appeals.

“We will be asking the zoning board for a full variance from the commercial requirement,” said Roberts. “We are hoping to have the Planning (Commission’s) positive recommendation before we go to the zoning board in early December.”

No one was going to rain on the Pleasantville Panthers girls’ soccer team’s parade on Sunday.

Despite a cold and wet afternoon, community members lined the streets of Bedford Road and Romer Avenue and packed the Pleasantville High School’s auditorium to honor the newly-crowned Class B state champions.

“It’s such a difficult feat to accomplish,” said Coach Chris Osterhoudt. “Obviously, it’s always a dream of coaches and teams to get to this point but (winning) the section is like the number one goal, and then you never know from there. I never thought we would, but what a great feeling it is.”

During the ceremony, community members took every opportunity to loudly cheer the team’s 25 players. Osterhoudt, Athletic Director John Bauerlein and the four captains, Lauren Drillock, Avery Manna, Allison Portera and Analise Picart, spoke of the long practices that started in mid-August and the hard work that contributed to a 20-1-2 season. They also mentioned the dedication and their commitment to one another as a key intangible that helped propel the team to the first girls’ state soccer title in school history.

“These girls behind me and next to me are family,” said Picart, a junior. “From Aug. 19 to Nov. 17, spending each and every day with my best friends is an experience like no other. Our season went as long as it possibly could and I am grateful for it. As hard as it is to say goodbye, we look forward to next year as we strive to win more championships.”

Bauerlein said there are other qualities besides athletic talent that made the team special. In addition to success on the field, each one of the players has at least a 90 average in the classroom.

The community packed the Pleasantville High School auditorium to pay tribute to the girls’ soccer team and their accomplishment of winning a state title.

Bedford to Survey Community About Potential School Closings

By Erin Maher

The Bedford School District will roll out a survey in January to gauge community sentiment on the district’s Long Range Facilities plan that introduced the possibility of closing two of the district’s elementary schools.

To address the issue, school officials retained Interactive Inc., a national evaluation firm, to explore ways the district could utilize its space with a smaller student population. In October, Interactive Inc. and the district held four community forums to educate the population on the process.

Next, the district will conduct the survey, that will be available through the mail or completed online in the two-week period of Jan. 8-22. On Feb. 10 and 11, the board will hold additional community forums where trustees plan to present to the public its costs, three-year budget estimates and a report on the community.

Interactive Inc. plans to present its recommendation to the board in March, with plans for the board to adopt the final Long Range Facilities plan by June.

Since the announcement, parents and members of the community have consistently spoken out against the closing of any schools during Board of Education meetings.

David Menken, a Bedford Village resident, said at last Wednesday’s board meeting that he opposed any closures, noting that his children went to the district’s elementary, middle and high schools.

“I’m encouraging the board to keep schools open because these schools, especially in Bedford, in Pound Ridge, the schools form the basis of the community,” Menken said.

Trustees are expected to finalize the draft of the survey at its Dec. 11 meeting.

In September, Superintendent of Schools Dr. Christopher Manno outlined the district’s long-range plan, which mentioned the options of keeping all five Bedford elementary schools open or closing one or two of the schools. Currently, the district operates Mount Kisco Elementary, West Patent, Bedford Village, Bedford Hills and Pound Ridge elementary schools, all serving grades K-5.

One factor cited in the exploration of whether to close up to two elementary schools was the district’s 10-year enrollment projections, concluding in 2028. There were 1,384 students in grades 9-12 in 2018, but projections forecast 997 high school students by 2028. Districtwide enrollment has fallen from 4,367 students in 2013-14 to 3,915 last year.

Excavation Key Hurdle for Chap Crossing Town Home Basements

By Martin Wilbur

A revised plan that would include basements in the 91 town homes proposed for Chappaqua Crossing is one of the key issues New Castle town officials must resolve before agreeing to an updated site plan.

During a joint work session involving the town and planning boards last Tuesday, there didn’t appear to be objections to the concept of basements but concern was raised about the excavation that would be required. Members of both boards expressed reservations that the volume of dirt that would have to be stored on site or trucked off site could create an untenable situation.

Since Toll Brothers, the luxury home building company retained by developer Summit/Greenfield, plans to build the 91 units in stages dictated by market conditions, there were worries voiced last week that the site could be a construction zone for years.

“It seems to me, anyway, that the conversations have evolved and we’ve gotten to the point where we’ve gotten a certain level of comfort (about the basements),” said Planning Board Chairman Robert Kirkwood. “We’re not there yet because we still have to get this information about how it’s going to work with the cut and fill and the construction and the sequencing, but it seems to me that somehow, some way, that we can deal with that issue.”

Planning Board member Thomas Curley said a workable sequencing plan is critical since 91,000-square-foot basements with excavation reaching 10 feet would yield more than 900,000 cubic feet of dirt.

“It’s the equivalent of taking two acres of land and digging down 10 feet and that’s just a lot of dirt,” Curley said. “If you add up the number of trucks that’s a problem. That’s like a thousand trucks that are going to have to move off this property.”

Representatives for Toll Brothers said much of the dirt would be reused on the site, including for construction of the loop road.

The joint meeting was held to discuss the changes a week before the opening of Tuesday evening’s Town Board public hearing on whether to revise the Multi-Family Planned Development Preliminary Development Concept Plan (MFPD PDCP) that it passed in 2015. The Town Board must agree to a series of requested changes in Summit/Greenfield’s petition that was submitted to the town earlier this fall.

Several of the eight other changes outlined in the petition, including the reduction in the length of the driveways, an increase in the square footage of each unit, the increase in footprint and floor area and increasing the area of disturbance from 19 to 21 acres, did not appear to be problematic to the two boards. If the Town Board agrees to adding the basements, the changes to the driveways, average unit size, footprint and floor area and disturbance would automatically be created.

Supervisor Robert Greenstein said he understands Toll Brothers’ insistence on the basements because it makes the units far more attractive.

“Basically, I think the basements are fine and if we can limit them to no bedrooms that’s what we’ll do,” Greenstein said. “The fact that empty-nesters are going to live there, they’re either going to want the space for recreation or storage or both, I think basements are very important.”

There had been previous concerns from members of both boards that adding basements could lead to some residents converting the space to a living area.

Last week, the attorney for the Planning Board, Les Steinman, recommended that a prohibition against using the basements as living space should be written into the deed restriction and also be required by the Homeowners Association.

It also is expected that Chappaqua School District representatives will attend this week’s public hearing to address the expected bump in schoolchildren generated by the townhomes.

Another issue that needs to be resolved is preservation of the Thomas V. Wright House, the 1850s farmhouse used by Reader’s Digest that is deteriorating. Members of both boards have reached consensus to see the structure preserved.

James Fitzpatrick, Toll Brothers’ division president in New York, said that his company is committed to preserving the exterior of the house but the interior would have to be repurposed in order to make the structure usable.

Greenstein said that Town Historian Gray Williams has objected to that plan because the interior is of far greater historic significance.

Tuesday’s public hearing is during the New Castle Town Board’s regularly scheduled meeting at Town Hall that is set to begin at 7 p.m.
The all-male audience listened closely to Colleen Griffin Wagner last Tuesday evening. About 45 men gathered in the Pleasantville High School cafeteria for Dads Night for Youth Mental Health and were eager to know how to connect with youths suffering from a variety of mental health illnesses.

“We’ve always struggled with getting dads out,” said Brian Halloran, who founded Break the Hold (BTH) Foundation last year after his 19-year-old son committed suicide. “As you learn more about it [mental health issues], you realize it touches everybody. We get calls from parents saying ‘My son’s friend said this and what should we do?’”

Break the Hold and PvilleCares, a free biweekly drop-in family support group that helps families deal with young and young adult substance abuse, addiction and mental illness, co-sponsored the event.

Wagner’s presentation focused on how to recognize and what to do when confronting someone with mental health issues. She said fathers, uncles, grandfathers, brothers, coaches and friends represent a critical group who could intervene and support a youngster who is enduring difficulties. The outreach was to appeal to fathers or male relatives and teachers who are often left out of the loop.

Several hands went up when Wagner asked how many are in contact with children.

“You’re the people that are right there to help,” she said. “You can be the person a kid comes to. You can be a changemaker.”

Wagner, a former village trustee, is a professional mental health counselor and a certified instructor for the National Council for Behavioral Health. She related a story of a 10-year-old boy from Ireland visiting his dad in Pleasantville years ago during the summer. The boy showed clear signs of desperation but nobody understood what those signs meant. Wagner learned that soon after returning to Ireland he committed suicide.

Wagner said classes on recognizing warning signs are as essential as CPR training.

“We cannot leave all the kids that are having issues to social workers or mental health help counselors; there are not enough to go around,” she said “What I’ve learned over the years is the more we know, the more comfortable we are in intervening.”

Wagner noted the following facts:

- One in four children before the age of 18 will have mental health issues, most of which develop during adolescence;
- One in five will experience a mental health issue or crisis;
- 17.1 million youths under 18 have had a psychiatric disorder, more than those with cancer, AIDS and diabetes combined; and
- 50 percent of mental health issues are established by the age of 14 and 75 percent by age 24.

“What kids don’t do is they don’t tell us when another kid is in trouble,” Wagner said. “That’s the stigma we need to wipe away. When I talk to kids in schools or in group meetings, I tell them ‘Would you rather have a mad friend or a dead friend?’”

There are techniques for adults to practice in order to reach friends of teens and adolescents displaying abnormal behavior. During the 90-minute presentation, Wagner addressed the signs of a youth who is at risk and how to deal with a potential suicidal youngster. She gave brief explanations of various illnesses, such as Attention Deficit Disorder, Oppositional Defiant Disorder, bipolar disorder, depression, eating disorders, anxiety, post-traumatic stress syndrome and self-harming.

Wagner said normal indicators of depression are sadness, being subdued or quiet or having little energy. But with youngsters suffering from mental illness, it’s anger and impulsiveness.

“We think they are acting out, but they’re not,” she said.

Seeking help for those who are troubled is essential. If a teen who typically visits your house seems off, engage them or speak to a parent, but don’t let it slip by. Wagner said. If an adult sees a youngster acting differently, she urged the audience to engage with them verbally.

“You can start a conversation with ‘I’ve noticed that...’ or ‘Want to walk with me right now?’ You do not want to focus on their changing behavior,” Wagner said. “You don’t want to ‘fix’ them. Also, giving praise when deserved goes a long way.”

A technique called reflective listening – repeating back what is said – is also helpful and shows that you’re a good listener, she said. Put away your cell phone, be accepting and reserve judgment.

Interspersed with the talk, three segments of “Suicide: The Ripple Effect” were shown, a documentary by Kevyn Hae, who is a friend of Wagner’s. Hines attempted suicide at 19, jumping off the Golden Gate Bridge. The film chronicles the impact of his attempt on others and his work as a mental health advocate since then.

Wagner spoke emphatically about connecting a troubled person with the right resources and following up. Westchester Medical Center is the closest hospital with a psychiatric unit and everyone should learn the hospitals that have detox centers.

There’s also the Text Crisis Line: 741741. Last year the line received more than 100 million texts.

At the end of the meeting Pleasantville resident Chad Kraus told the group, “I’m coming from the perspective of wanting others to know you are not alone, and if there are people in this room that are struggling with their own kids, nieces or nephews or neighbors, I’ve been through it like Brian [Halloran], and number one, no one is alone. We have to stop the stigma. Ever you want to talk to a fellow dad in the community and get a dad’s perspective, I’m happy to also help you.”

Halloran said knowing how to react is the first step in opening a conversation and then informing the right people.

“We are the answers to the problems with the next generation,” he said.

P’ville Program Details How to Help Teens With Mental Health Issues

By Abby Luby

Colleen Griffin Wagner, a mental health counselor, led a presentation last week for more than 40 men about how to recognize the warning signs of mental illness and what to do.

On the heels of a successful suicide awareness and education campaign, the Westchester County Department of Community Mental Health (DCMH) has been awarded a $100,000 grant to develop, test and refine a formal in-depth suicide review process.

The money is part of a $340,000 grant funded by the New York State Office of Mental Health (NYS OMH) that is being awarded to four counties greatly impacted by suicide – Westchester, Suffolk, Erie and Onondaga counties.

The purpose of the grant, “Learning from Loss: Suicide Fatality Reviews for Effective Prevention Activities,” is to conduct detailed reviews of suicide deaths to identify systemic patterns and to ensure accurate data collection by local medical examiner offices. The DCMH officially launched its Westchester Suicide Fatality Review Team last Tuesday with a presentation from Dr. Kimberly Repp from Washington County, Ore. and other representatives from New York State.

“In order to further our efforts to reduce the number of suicide deaths in Westchester, we need to be able to look at these tragedies with a more critical eye,” said County Executive George Latimer. “Experts have long believed that suicide deaths can be prevented, and with a focused Suicide Fatality Review Team in place, we can aim to lower the chances of suicide in Westchester.”

“We are appreciative of the New York State Office of Mental Health for awarding us this opportunity to prevent suicide deaths in our county,” said Michael Orth, commissioner of the county Department of Community Mental Health. “We have assembled talented partners to create our new-formed Suicide Fatality Review Team under the leadership of our medical examiner, Department of Health and Department of Community Mental Health along with other critical stakeholders.”

The model being implemented in Westchester is based on a program that was successfully rolled out in Washington County, Ore., where a multidisciplinary team with representatives from the medical examiner’s office, healthcare providers, law enforcement, crisis workers, clergy and other community partners shared data during their reviews of suicide deaths. Washington County has seen the number of suicide deaths drop over each of the last three years the program has been in place.

For additional information on Westchester County’s Suicide Fatality Review Committee, contact Michael Orth at 914-995-5225 or e-mail mno6@westchestergov.com.

Speeding on South Kensico Avenue in Valhalla, the road leading to Pat Henry Field, is not the problem that some residents believe it to be.

This was the conclusion shared by Mount Pleasant Police Chief Paul Oliva with the Town Board at its Nov. 19 work session.

Oliva said at the request of Supervisor Carl Fulgenzi, the department had recently conducted a traffic survey of the narrow residential street. Concerns about speeding have been raised frequently by neighbors as part of the ongoing discussions surrounding the proposed installation of lights at the ball field.

Residents have contended that there will likely be a sharp traffic increase on the residential dead-end street if the lights are installed and the hours that the field would be in use are extended.

Oliva said that the department placed rubber strips on the pavement in front of 95 S. Kensico Ave. The equipment tabulates the number of cars that travel along the road and gauges the speed of each car. The speed limit for South Kensico Avenue is 30 miles per hour.

During the data collection period, from Oct. 4-15, no vehicles traveled faster than 40 miles per hour, Oliva said. Seven cars traveled between 36 and 40 miles per hour and 3,212 cars traveled below the speed limit, including 85 percent of those vehicles clocked at no more than 24 miles per hour. Oliva said the time period included a Little League weekend tournament.

The results are similar to a study conducted in April 2018 during the Little League’s spring season when 85 percent of the cars traveled at 25 miles per hour.

Oliva said the road has been given a “low enforcement rating,” meaning that while police patrol the street, it is not a location where the department has had to dedicate officers to curb frequent speeding.

Fulgenzi had also asked the chief about car accidents on South Kensico Avenue. Oliva said he found no record of any accidents.

Councilwoman Laurie Smalley asked whether speed bumps might be appropriate for the road. Oliva said the town has a policy not to resort to speed bumps to avoid liability for damage to low vehicles crossing the bumps. He suggested the town possibly consider solar-powered speed signs that have been effective in reminding motorists to slow down.

Oliva said he was aware of the residents’ concerns but the facts suggest South Kensico Avenue does not experience many problems.

“You can speculate, but this is the data,” he said.

Data Reveals No Speeding Issues on Valhalla’s South Kensico Ave.

P’ville Man Charged for Taking Sexually Explicit Photos of a Child

By Martin Wilbur

A Pleasantville man was indicted last week on 12 charges in connection with taking sexually explicit photos of a child, the Westchester County district attorney’s office announced.

John Passaretti, 50, who also has a residence in West Palm Beach, Fla., was charged with 11 felony counts including two counts each of use of a child in a sexual performance; promoting an obscene performance by a child; promoting a sexual performance by a child; possessing an obscene performance by a child; and possessing a sexual performance by a child. Additionally, Passaretti was indicted on a single count of first-degree sexual abuse, a Class D felony, and endangering the welfare of a child, a misdemeanor.

Passaretti appeared before Westchester County Court Judge Anne Minihan last Thursday and is being held on $500,000 bail. His next court appearance is scheduled for Dec. 17.

The district attorney’s office said that on Oct. 29, Passaretti was arrested by Port Chester police with the assistance of Pleasantville police, after a complaint was made that he may have photographed a young child in a sexual manner. The incident was captured the day before in a home on a video camera system, often referred to as a nanny cam.

The High-Tech Crime Unit of the district attorney’s criminal investigators assisted in the technology investigation.

Nov. 15: A caller reported at 10:37 a.m. that he lost his wallet in Stop & Shop on North Broadway, and when he went to customer service to inquire if it was found, all the cash was missing. The responding officer secured owner and witness depositions; a report will follow.

Nov. 16: An officer on patrol reported multiple chickens in the roadway on Morningside Place at 10:42 a.m. The chickens were corralled into the backyard of its owner; matter adjusted.

Nov. 16: An officer reported being on Route 120 with a disabled vehicle at 5:41 p.m. A computer inquiry revealed the operator’s driving privileges were suspended. The vehicle was released to the registered owner at the scene and the operator was issued a summons for aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

Nov. 19: An officer reported finding a New York license plate (HUP8734) on Washington Avenue at 12:48 a.m.

Nov. 19: An officer reported three garbage bags dumped in the cul-de-sac of Cooney Hill Road at 5:20 a.m. The state Department of Transportation was contacted for removal.

Pleasantville Police Department

Nov. 18: A local resident reported at headquarters at 2:05 p.m. that her online account was hacked allegedly by a party that was known to her. The matter is under investigation.

Nov. 20: A Tompkins Avenue business reported at 12 p.m. that there were suspicious transactions. The case is under investigation.

Armonk Ready to Welcome Frosty Home Again This Sunday

By Martin Wilbur

Frosty the Snowman is ready to make his journey home to Armonk this Sunday to be greeted by adoring crowds ready to usher in the holiday season.

North Castle is planning its biggest Frosty Day yet, the 10th anniversary of the annual celebration since the town claimed everyone’s favorite snowman as its own. The song's lyricist, Steve Nelson, moved to Armonk a year after the hit song was first released in 1960 and remained in town until his death in 1981.

Robbie Morris, president of the Friends of Frosty, which organizes the event, said it’s easy to understand why so many families in town, throughout Westchester and beyond circle the day on the calendar. “The whole day is about kids and about having fun,” Morris said. “It’s not a religious thing. Everybody can come and enjoy and have a wonderful day.”

This year, the festivities get underway at noon, a half-hour earlier than in past years. There will be about 50 activities throughout the hamlet, from miniature train rides and horse-drawn wagon rides to face painting, holiday ornament decorating, and cookie frosting. Children can also make their own holiday ornament decorating, and cookie frosting. Children can also make their own Frosty the Snowman illustrations. Those are on display at Framings.

There are various musical groups that circulate throughout the downtown, including a kazoo band this year. The popular stilts walkers will return.

Morris said Frosty Day doesn’t cost families much. The activities and the train rides cost nothing and various merchants hand out free snacks. “Everything’s put on for free by the community,” he said. “We’ve got sponsors to pay for all the other things, so it’s really a fantastic deal.”

For this year’s renewal of Frosty Day, the town will welcome a special guest. Patricia Fenwick, who grew up in White Plains, was the inspiration for Nelson’s lyrics, said Ed Woodyard, a member of the Friends of Frosty. As a young child, she made a small snowman after the first snowfall of the season but by the next morning she was in tears because it had melted, he said.

Fenwick’s grandfather was Jack Rollins, Nelson’s songwriting partner. Rollins told a young Patricia not to worry because the snowman will come back again someday. Her family contacted Frosty organizers about the connection and they will be making the drive from Ohio to attend.

“From those tears, Frosty’s song and story have delighted families for about 70 years,” Woodyard said.

The parade will step off at 4 p.m., proceed up Main Street to Maple Avenue and end at Wampus Brook Park for the tree lighting ceremony. This year some 50 organizations will be part of the parade, Morris said.

For those looking to warm up or rest their feet, stop by the Armonk branch of the North Castle Public Library, which will be showing a continuous loop of the Frosty movie from 12:30 to 3 p.m. Judy Willsey, the proprietor of Framings on Main Street, said her Frosty illustrations contacted the Friends that he had the original Little Golden Book Frosty the Snowman illustrations. Those are on display at Framings.

“He lent them to us and I framed them and they’re all hanging in our window,” Willsey said. “They’re just incredible. It’s a fantastic deal.”

Frosty the Snowman will be the star attraction for Armonk’s 10th annual Frosty Day festivities, to be held this Sunday from 12 to 5 p.m.

Museum exhibit consisting of photos and memorabilia dating back to the 1950s has been moved to the library. During the past year, a collector of children’s book illustrations contacted the Friends that he had the original Little Golden Book Frosty the Snowman illustrations. Those are on display at Framings.

Third Shift: Balancing Work, Life & Eldercare

Presented by Donna B. Fedus, M.A.

The work-life balance is a familiar struggle, but when caregiving is added to the mix, it can feel like you’re working a third shift. Dementia caregiving brings its own special challenges, which will be explored. While there are no easy answers, it can help to think through your options systematically with a gerontologist and get support from others on the same journey.

Join us to: Define what needs to be done and who can help. Discuss ways to set respectful boundaries with your elders. Discover ways to add respite care to your list when you don’t feel like you have a minute to spare.

Please RSVP by Friday, December 6th

Westchester County Executive George Latimer released the county Planning Department’s Housing Needs Assessment, which revealed that the county needs over 11,000 more units of additional affordable housing to meet demand.

At a Nov. 19 press conference, Latimer said that affordable housing is a contributing factor to a well-functioning county. The assessment was done to establish data for the creation and preservation of affordable housing in Westchester, he said.

“This assessment is not a fair share housing allocation plan; it does not assign any number of units to specific municipalities. The assessment looks at the county’s history of housing policies; lays out the methodology for data analysis; provides findings on a wide variety of demographic, housing stock and affordability issues; and provides recommendations, including best practices from across the country, to help the county move forward in addressing its affordable housing needs,” Latimer explained.

The assessment used a standard statistical approach viewing Westchester County as a whole and with a separate look at the municipalities.

Findings of the assessment include:
- There are 34,221 Emergency Tenant Protection Act (ETPA) units in 1,773 buildings in the county; 141,570 households (41.4 percent of the total number in the county) are living in homes and apartments that are paying more than 50 percent of their income toward their housing costs.
- There is a significant shortage of housing for extremely low-income renters, people with disabilities, seniors, large families and the homeless. In particular, families and individuals who face intellectual and developmental disabilities, who need specialized housing with services, are not being adequately served.
- There are 89,839 people living in poverty in Westchester (9.4 percent of the total population).
- The greatest growth in population is in the 85 and over cohort (the towns of Lewisboro and Pound Ridge have 232 percent and 202 percent increases, respectively), between 2000 and 2017, demonstrating the need for senior housing.
- The combined population of the five largest cities represent 46 percent of the total population in the county.
- The 30 to 44 age group shows decline, which may mean there aren’t enough affordable housing options for young families.
- More people commute into Westchester to work than those who live and work in the county; the majority of commuters (58 percent) drive alone to work.
- There is no municipality where the market rate rent for a 2-bedroom unit is affordable to households earning the local hourly renter wage; the greatest monthly gap, at $1,823, is in the Village of Pleasantville. Municipalities with gaps over $1,700 are in the City of Peekskill, the Town of Bedford and the Village of Port Chester.
- There are only three municipalities where the HUD FMR is affordable to households earning the local hourly renter wage – the Town of New Castle, and the villages of Bronxville and Pelham Manor.
- The Housing Action Council found that 68.6 percent of households seeking housing under the housing settlement were already living in Westchester; there were 9,280 applicants for 395 affordable rental units in development – a ratio of 23 applicants for every unit of rental housing.
- The finding that 50.7 percent of all owner households earning between 30 percent and 50 percent of the county’s Area Median Income (AMI) are severely cost-burdened should not be a surprise, the report noted, but the conclusion that 22.9 percent of households earning between 80 percent and 100 percent of AMI might be at 100 percent AMI earns about $117,100 in Westchester County). It is important to note that these households have housing but they cannot comfortably afford it.

Similarly, the assessment concludes that 2,556 households in the county live in substandard housing. The assessment also found that 4,523 households are severely overcrowded.

The total number of new affordable housing units needed, according to the assessment, is 11,703. This represents the total number of Westchester households that are severely overcrowded or homeless, as well as the non-Westchester Homeseeker registrants.

Pace University and Con Edison have partnered to install a solar tree on the Pleasantville campus that will provide 1,400 watts of energy to help power various functions at the school.

The nearly 15-foot-tall, 2,755-pound “eTree,” which was unveiled last Friday afternoon on the lawn outside the Kessel Student Center during a ribbon-cutting ceremony, contains seven solar panels supported by its branches that will power free Wi-Fi, six USB ports, an interactive LCD display screen and night lighting. The tree is manufactured by Sologic, which has offices in Midland, Mich. and several countries around the world. It was founded by Israeli entrepreneur Michael Lasry.

Pace President Marvin Krislov said that the university has long been committed to responsible environmental practices, including through its environmental studies programs in Pleasantville and at the Elisabeth Haub School of Law in White Plains which is noted for its environmental law program.

He said that what made the project more satisfying was the idea for the project came from the university’s Student Sustainability Committee.

“The fact that it was out of a student-originated initiative is really an impressive reflection of the kind of impact our students have,” Krislov said.

In addition to providing power, the solar tree contains benches at its base that are shaded by the panels for anyone on campus to sit under.

The tree was funded by a Con Edison grant. The utility has undertaken an increasing number of clean energy projects in recent years, said Jane Solnick, Con Edison’s director of Westchester Regional and Community Affairs.

Placed in front of the student center will mean that the maximum number of people on campus will see the structure and perhaps learn more about renewable energy, she said, calling it “the wave of the future.”

“This is an environmentally-friendly source of power and it’s right there for everyone to see,” Solnick said. “Talk about front and center. It’s where every student walks. It’s a wonderful location. It’s the future for us.”

An informal poll of 152 students, faculty and staff members at Pace showed support for adding a solar tree to the grounds and chose the e-tree design from among three design concepts.

Make Small Business Saturday More Than a One-Time Event

By Quint Studer

This Saturday, Nov. 30 is Small Business Saturday®. Starting in 2010, American Express designated this day – the Saturday after Thanksgiving each year – to encourage people to “shop small.”

The financial services company reports that since the commemoration began, “Consumers have spent an estimated $103 billion across all Small Business Saturdays combined.”

As a community revitalization expert, I welcome every chance to shine a spotlight on the small businesses and local entrepreneurs who make up the economic engine of most small and mid-size towns and cities. Days like Small Business Saturday can help business owners get face time with customers who might not normally shop there. And consumers get to see what they might be missing – the personal connections and experiences they may not always get from online or big-box retailers.

Still, shopping small and local can and should be more than a symbolic once-a-year event. Anyone who wants a stronger, more vibrant community needs to support their small businesses every day. They are the key to economic revitalization. They play a vital role in creating the “sense of place” that gives a community its competitive advantage.

According to the U.S. Small Business Administration, small businesses create two out of every three net new jobs in the private sector. What’s more, over half of all Americans work for or own a small business. There’s a symbiotic relationship between residents and small business owners. They really need each other. Small businesses provide jobs and keep the dollars circulating locally. Their owners have an active and personal interest in the well-being of the community. They live there. Their kids go to school there. They care about what happens when wealth is created, business owners are more likely to turn around and reinvest in the community.

In fact, small businesses have a far more important role in their communities than ever before. The old “pillars” – big institutions like banks, hospitals, media outlets and other businesses – are no longer locally owned. The executives who work for them play a critical short-term role in the community, but often they’re not there for the long haul. It’s no longer a given that they’ll retire there. So small business leaders must step in to fill this leadership void.

A few decades ago, the owners of these pillar businesses were committed to keeping their communities vibrant. They knew their economic health depended on it. But now that the owners of these former pillars live elsewhere, they just don’t have the same intimate connection to the community.

It makes sense for small businesses to take the lead in pulling communities out of the economic slump many have been in for years. When communities are vibrant, there are more high-paying jobs and people can afford to shop. Quality of life improves. There’s more money for schools and programs that lift people out of poverty. Everyone wins.

Many small businesses have made their commitment to their local community part of their brand. This is what customers want. The more chaotic and uncertain the world becomes, the more people crave a safe and stable home base. This is a huge trend, and it’s taking place all over America.

This is how the small business owner can compete with the mega-retailers. Create an experience for your community: Citizens will know they’re being looked after, and they will want to do business locally. This can become your competitive advantage. Take care of the community, and it will take care of you.

The bottom line? Don’t shop locally only on Small Business Saturday. Do it every chance you get, all year long. A purchase from a small business owner is an investment in your community. Who better to support than those who are working so hard to create a better future for everyone?

Letter to the Editor

Councilwoman Should Take a Lesson in Political Graciousness

After 15 years in local politics, including election wins and a loss, I believe one of the most important lessons I have learned is to always be gracious in victory or defeat, irrespective of the final vote margin. Unfortunately, it appears that Francesca Hagadus has yet to learn this lesson.

Hagadus’s letter in last week’s Examiner (“FULL GENIUS, Mt. Pleasant Republicans’ Denial of Mailer is Shameful”) reeks of sour grapes. She blames her Town Board colleagues, a supposed lunch offer and a singular mailer for her defeat. She chides her opponents and questions whether they knew and approved of that mailer.

Despite the musings in a recent Examiner editorial, the mailer appeared to be fact-based. Hagadus vocalized support for two tax increases (hotel and sales), called federal law enforcement officials “thugs,” “goons” and “Brownshirts” on social media last year and defended the so-called right of sex offenders to vote in elementary schools in 2018. To my knowledge, she has not refuted the assertion that she has yet to visit the Highway Department since taking office and serving as its Town Board liaison.

Hagadus claims these facts were part of a nefarious smear campaign against her. Ironically, this very paper rebuked her own “Washington-style” politics in the waning stages of last year’s election.

Put simply, the 2019 campaign is over and the time for governing begins anew. Mount Pleasant taxpayers have spoken and their decisions deserve to be respected. From one non-victorious candidate to another: Be gracious and carry on.

Mt. Kisco Chamber to Launch Buy Local Program This Saturday

Studies show that every dollar spent locally generates twice as much for the local economy. Think of it as a sustainability program for your community. Buying local creates jobs and more jobs help the money flow back into the community for the growth of other businesses, additional tax revenues and charitable endeavors. Buying local benefits everyone.

The Mt. Kisco Chamber of Commerce announces a new initiative that shares exciting special offers, promotions, new product announcements, programs and events through its new Buy Local program. Participating chamber-affiliated businesses will have the opportunity to share monthly offers related to their product or services for access by the public with the new All Things Kisco Buy Local Card that begins distribution starting on Small Business Saturday, Nov. 30, at locations throughout the village.

“Our goal is to promote doing business where your heart is and help keep the local economy healthy,” said Loretta Brooks, co-executive director of the Mount Kisco Chamber of Commerce. “The program will highlight special offers for savings and introduce new services to the local community.”

At the launch of the program, this Small Business Saturday and going forward, the latest current offers can be viewed on the chamber’s website at www.mkchamber.com.

As a realtor, I find that one of the more difficult subjects to discuss with a listing client is clutter – or rather decluttering. Outside of my real estate business, I have only occasionally dipped into the world of decluttering because I have relied on my wife Margaret, a natural neatnik and a supremely organized person, to keep our home in order.

Still, that doesn't mean I shouldn't lend assistance to her, or at least learn how to not get in the way. Over the years, some of the advice to the organizationally-challenged has changed, and some has reappeared in a new form many times over.

Back in the 1980s, cleaning expert Don Aslett published “Clutter's Last Stand,” one of the most popular of his many titles. Aslett’s claim to fame was to communicate the techniques and tools of a professional cleaner to the average homemaker so that she (or – shocking for the time – he!) could clean faster and more economically. His advice on clutter is to toss it, and his book is filled with inspiration on overcoming the internal resistance to doing so.

In the 1990s, organization expert Julie Morgenstern took a gentler approach in her book “Organizing from the Inside Out.” Much of the basic advice is the same, but she advises that once the clutter-clearing dust has settled, you examine your life and interests when deciding where the things in your life should go.

A later organizing guru is Marie Kondo, whose 2014 book, “The Life-Changing Magic of Tidying Up: The Japanese Art of Decluttering and Organizing,” was a worldwide bestseller, and whose next book, “Spark Joy: An Illustrated Master Class on the Art of Organizing and Tidying Up,” was equally successful. If you take only a superficial glance at her KonMari Method, it seems to be about folding and arranging clothing and other items into mesmerizingly neat and tiny arrangements. Kondo is featured in many hypnotic YouTube videos demonstrating this aspect of her method, and you will probably learn a tidier way to fold shirts from her, if nothing else.

Her system goes well beyond that, however, ultimately focusing not as much on what to discard, but on choosing what to keep based on how much joy it brings you. For example, in Kondo’s second book, to determine whether or not a series of books gives you joy, you may want to arrange them in a stack and hug it to see how it makes you feel. That’s a little far out, even for me, but her passion certainly has had an effect on people.

Among her more pragmatic pieces of advice, she advises the opposite of Cilley’s “FlyLady” approach of baby steps. When decluttering, pick one category, scour your entire home for items in that category and sort through them all at once. Seeing all 12 of the similar shirts, for example, will make it easier to know which are your favorites, and the lift from completing the task will be a reward in itself.

The recurring thread in all this advice seems to be that clutter will not make you happy, and whatever does make you really happy is not clutter. I may not reach my wife’s levels of neatness, but I have certainly felt the pleasant effects of letting go of old things as my life and my interests change.

Now is as good a time as any to begin the process again.

When Jane Condon was approached by her friend, Cathy Gates, about performing in a benefit comedy show for St. Stephen’s Episcopal Church in Armonk, there was little hesitation.

Condon, a longtime comedian, lives just over the border in Greenwich, so not only would it be convenient but she thought that her humor would easily translate to the crowd in a neighboring community, albeit in a different state.

“I’ve been on a number of TV shows. I’m over in Greenwich. I think I can speak Armonk,” Condon said.

Condon will headline an evening of comedy on Saturday, Dec. 7 at Whippoorwill Hall that also features fellow Boston area native Kathe Farris. Rabbi Joshua Strom from Congregation B’nai Yisrael in Armonk will be the master of ceremonies. The show starts at 7:30 p.m.

Gates, a vestry member at St. Stephen’s, said she and other parishioners at the church were looking for a fresh and fun angle for a fundraiser to help support teen programs and bring aboard a youth coordinator at the church. Friends with Condon since their children attended the same preschool together, Gates reached out to Condon to see if she was receptive to the idea.

“I think we were trying to think of something that will lift the spirit of everyone because, as they say, laughter is good for something that will lift the spirit of everyone,” Gates said.

“Most of all, there is nothing better than live comedy, she said. “So it goes hand in hand with our mission.”

Condon, a veteran comic who has appeared on “The View” and “The Today Show” among her television appearances and has performed innumerable shows, including an off-Broadway production, said she couldn’t turn the idea down. Armonk, she figured, would be right in her wheelhouse, performing for the 40-something suburban crowd.

Characterizing herself as a “cleanish comedian,” she said that suburban moms are an underutilized resource on the comedy circuit.

“I mostly do theaters,” Condon said. “I do more theaters than clubs. Comedy clubs, the audiences are more young people in their twenties dating. Who wants to listen to your mom? My son corrected me and said ‘Everybody has a mom, mom.’”

Condon also has no qualms sharing the bill with a rabbi. For her, it makes perfect sense to have Rabbi Strom open for a benefit for an Episcopalian church. Actually, he and Fr. Nils Chittenden, the church’s rector, are friends.

“Every rabbi that I have ever known was very funny,” she said. “We have him open. Then Kathe Farris. It’s unusual to have two moms on a three-person show, but it’s special to have two moms. She has girls, I have boys, so we pretty much cover the landscape.”

Condon grew up in Brockton, Mass., outside of Boston, the youngest of four children. Craving attention, as she put it, Condon honed her humor at home. While she always thought she was funny, Condon said she was no better than the ninth funniest person in her high school graduating class.

“I was the person that would think she was funny, Condon said. “Then I traveled to Japan and wrote a book on Japanese women. But she was bitten by the comedy bug and started appearing at clubs years ago.

Condon said her sons love the idea of her performing, and she even lets her husband attend one of her shows every year.

“For a period of time, she tried to be taken seriously. Condon worked as a journalist, then traveled to Japan and wrote a book on Japanese women. But she was bitten by the comedy bug and started appearing at clubs years ago.

Condon said her sons love the idea of her performing, and she even lets her husband attend one of her shows every year.

Most of all, there is nothing better than live comedy, she said.

“My job is to just make people forget, to get them out of their own little world and I invite them into my world,” Condon said. Tickets for the show are $50 for adults and $35 for students. There are some premium seats for $95. For tickets and more information, visit www.ststephensarmonk.org.

Nonprofit, Masons Partner to Reprise P’ville Christmas Tree Sale

By Abby Luby

After last year’s unexpected cancellation of its popular Christmas tree sale, the Pleasantville International Association (PIA) is returning to sell trees and wreaths starting this week.

The popular sale, a major fundraiser for the organization, will take place at the Pleasantville Hiawatha Masonic Lodge, located at 283 Manville Rd., beginning this Friday, Nov. 29 from 5 to 8 p.m. There are also early bird hours on Friday starting at noon.

Previously held at the United Methodist Church on Bedford Road, there were rumors of the church’s insolvency last year when it was suddenly canceled. Then in June, the congregation officially disbanded and PIA was unable to receive permission to hold the sale at the church this year.

“People in the community were very upset because the tree sale had become a fixture in the community,” said Jackie Burton, a PIA member.

PIA’s Ambassador Program works in tandem with other organizations such as the American Field Service (AFS), The Experiment in International Living and Interlocken and Youth for Understanding. Launched in 1977, PIA has long been known for promoting and partially funding foreign travel for Pleasantville High School students and participating in student exchange programs. The nonprofit supports students wanting to experience life abroad and to carry out specific service projects in a different culture.

Students have always been referred to as “ambassadors” in the program.

“When students come back, they are required to share their experience with students in the middle and high schools,” said Burton. “They put together a detailed presentation with pictures and share what was important to them about their trip with the community.”

Burton’s son, Ryan, traveled to Thailand between his junior and senior year with help from the PIA program. Her husband, Tony, is an officer at the Masonic Lodge and suggested the two organizations collaborate. Raising money from the sale is critical for PIA, which provides potentially life-changing experiences for its participants.

One of the first students to enroll in the program was Pleasantville resident Jay Sullivan. A generation later, his four children followed in his footsteps.

“This experience has an enormous impact on students’ lives, many of whom have never traveled alone outside of the country,” Sullivan said. “It’s an eye-opening experience.”

He recalled when his son, John, returned from his trip to China, his other son, Sam, wanted to visit Ghana in West Africa.

“Sam had two homestay experiences, one in the capital of Accra, and the other in the countryside,” Sullivan said. “He became hooked on travel.”

He studied Arabic in college and spent a semester in Jordan living with a family. He joined the Peace Corps and taught for two years in a remote village in the mountains in Armenia.

“Not had for a kid who didn’t like to wander too far afield. We credit it all to his PIA experience,” Sullivan said.

He said his family has also hosted an exchange student from Germany.

“It was a terrific experience for our family,” Sullivan said. “We got to know him and he got to know our community.”

Other students sign up for cooking tours in southern France or language immersion programs, Burton said. There is also a political leaders tour where they meet with politicians and tour government buildings, she added.

Last summer, PIA ambassadors visited Thailand, Costa Rica and Ecuador. One of those students that PIA helped fund was Pleasantville High School junior Ella Agabob, who went to Ecuador.

“I wanted to travel to a country I wouldn’t have gone to for a vacation, someplace that was a little less touristy,” she said. “The home stay allowed me to fully immerse in their culture and the son and daughter were around my age. Even though we live so far away… because of the internet, we found we had similar tastes in music.”

Burton said a recent PIA meeting uncovered that about a dozen teens are strongly interested in traveling this year or next.

During the tree and wreath sale, the Masons will be offering child fingerprinting, a service they provide to parents for free. Santa will be on hand to take photos with children at various points. Hot chocolate and baked goods will be available.

The sale continues Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. until Christmas or until supplies are exhausted.

Thanksgiving: Time for Turkey, Football and Estate Planning

Traditionally, Thanksgiving is the holiday when the entire family, for better or worse, comes together. After the melatonin calms everyone’s nerves, this great opportunity for families to discuss sensitive topics that are often set aside for “some other time.”

In some instances, the discussion might be driven by children encouraging family members to get the ball rolling on their planning. In others, it might be a recognition by the family that a loved one needs assistance due to the onset or progression of a cognitive impairment, which forces family involvement. Parents who are actively engaged in their planning should use this as an opportunity to bring their children into the loop.

Often, children are concerned that their parents have no plan in place, but to their surprise, they learn that their parents have already met with an attorney and have put papers in their affairs. I find that many people prepare their estate planning documents, only to keep it a secret from their children and family. If you are a parent of adult children, it is a good idea to let them in on the secret. The administration of an estate becomes very difficult when those involved have no knowledge of the affairs prior to death.

If no planning has been done, you might suggest to your loved one that they should schedule a consultation with an elder law attorney to talk about preparing a last will and testament, Medicaid trust or revocable trust.

Too often, people are focused on the details of the specific planning techniques, rather than the goal of actual planning. For instance, do not try to explain the difference between a revocable trust and Medicaid trust to your family member. Rather, explain the importance of memorializing their wishes so the family can carry out their plan and protect their assets if they become sick and require long-term care. This will make it easier for them to take the next step and schedule a consultation. If they continue to be reluctant, suggest they begin with smaller items such as preparing a power of attorney. This is a good way for them to dip their toes into the water.

In that same fashion, you might ask parents about their feelings if they one day need long-term care and must spend a significant portion of their assets on it. The cost of such care would reduce the inheritance passing to their children. If this topic provokes any negative feelings, an adult child might suggest that they meet with an elder law attorney to discuss asset protection strategies, such as a Medicaid trust.

Where it is evident that a parent needs assistance due to cognitive impairments, be proactive and perhaps meet with an elder law attorney on your own for guidance and insight on potential solutions to ensure the well-being and safety of your loved one.

Remember, the goal is not to educate your loved ones, but to move the needle in the right direction by encouraging an atmosphere conducive to these sensitive conversations. Avoid telling them what to do. Rather, use real-life examples of other family members and friends.

Show your genuine concern for their well-being to guide them in the right direction.

Remember when the internet was a novelty? That new site, Amazon, had just gained widespread popularity for selling and shipping books to your doorstep, at a 30 percent discount. Now, Amazon has embedded itself in the very psyche of conducting our lives.

If I think back to the “good old days,” before there was Amazon Prime and others of its ilk, before Apple became the ultimate enabler in 2007 of managing our lives according to their business model, I remember the tactile nature of a shopping experience, when we wore out our shoe leather, not our keyboard or keypad buttons. At the breakneck speed with which the internet has consumed our lives, who can predict what lies ahead. A short 12 years after the introduction of the iPhone, a Yogi Berra quote seems prescient: “The future ain’t what it used to be.”

When I apply this smartphone phenomenon to my personal life, I reminisce of the meaning of commerce before the ubiquitous and all-consuming stranglehold of today’s technology.

Here’s my singular perspective:

1. Shop local? The plaintive call to support our neighborhood establishments becomes more difficult each year. Increasingly, we have no reasonable choice but to use our keypads, rather than our shoe leather, to wend our way through our shopping chores.

2. Use of our smartphones has been evolving. How many of us use the telephone feature as our primary contact with the outside world? Our “smartdevices” have created new alternatives to communicate with each other. While I’ve evolved from telephone to e-mail to texting as my primary mode of communication, today’s young generation has leapfrogged past me, relying more and more on Instagram, Snapchat, WhatsApp and several select platforms I’ve never heard of.

3. Dine at your favorite restaurant with friends and family? No need to do so in 2019. The online prepared-food industry penetration into our lives is rising at an astonishing rate. In the past, it was simple: pull that dog-eared menu from the kitchen drawer, call your local eatery, wait 20 minutes, then drive to pick up your order.

Here’s today’s gamechanger: bookmark your list of favorite restaurants on your device, order directly from their clickable menu and then select a home delivery app option. A few clicks and your favorite food is digitally processed and delivered to your door.

4. It wasn’t so long ago that our primary source for purchasing wines was our local retail shop. More and more I see this buying pattern transitioning to a virtual experience. A few of the numerous alternative resources available include:

   a) Wine apps that offer you curated offerings available with a simple “purchase” click.

   b) A plethora of online wine clubs offering their suggested selections, delivered to your door automatically every month or quarter. Just provide your credit card and you will be constantly stocked with the club’s favorite wines.

   c) Flash sale sites continue to proliferate. How can you turn down an offer to order a highly-rated wine (typically, the site’s unilateral rating) at a significant reduction in price (according to the site’s unconfirmed unilateral rating) at a significant reduction in price (according to the site’s unconfirmed unilateral rating)? In case you forget to check in constantly stocked with the club’s favorite wines.

   d) Direct-to-consumer sales are on the rise, as are the offerings. In the old days, the only outlet for many small producers was direct sales to consumers. The rub was the high cost of shipping. Today, that barrier has been significantly reduced. Consumers have the opportunity to enjoy a fine Napa Cabernet Sauvignon from a small producer of less than 100 cases at a price, including shipping, that allows the producer to compete with wines available in other consumer channels. And that’s outside of the Amazon Prime network.

I’m still a holdout for the physical interaction of securing my purchase, when possible. I prefer shoe heel clicks rather than mouse clicks. Join me in stemming the tide of digital dominance.

Valhalla Volleyball Team Captures the State Title

What a weekend it was for the Valhalla volleyball team up in Glens Falls. Just one day after winning all six of their games against the three other Class C state semifinalists in pool play, the Vikings dethroned the two-time defending champion Portville Panthers from Section 6 on Sunday afternoon, winning the state title three games to one.

In earning the team’s first-ever state championship, Valhalla was forced to come from behind. The Vikings dropped their opening game of the state final, but stepped up to take the next three by scores of 25-22, 25-16 and 25-13. Senior Jasmine Grant led the way for the Vikings and came away with most valuable player honors. Fellow seniors Linda Rossi and Stephanie Sicilian were chosen for the all-tournament team, and the entire Viking squad received a hero’s welcome from the community when the team bus returned Sunday night after the long ride home.

Valhalla’s Bid for the State Title is Ended by Gouverneur

By Andy Jacobs

In the span of two months, they had transformed themselves from hapless to heroic. But as they stood together in a jagged line near midfield during a postgame ceremony on Saturday afternoon, with heads bowed and tears in their eyes, the players on the Valhalla football team were suddenly faced with the realization that their dream of a state championship had come to an end.

Just moments before, quarterback Michael Dawson’s pass on the run in the final two minutes had been picked off by Gouverneur’s Joseph Cummings, sealing the Vikings’ fate and assuring Section 10’s Wildcats a come-from-behind 14-11 victory in a Class C state semifinal playoff game at Middletown High School’s Faller Field.

“I’m proud of them,” said Vikings head coach Stephen Boyer afterwards, asked what he would soon be telling his dejected players in the locker room. “It’s been a great season. It’s a dream. They carried it as far as they could. We were one half away from the (Carrier) Dome. You know, sometimes you’ve got to give the other team credit.”

On a day when Valhalla possessions were few and touchdowns were hard to come by, an 11-point Viking lead midway through the third quarter eventually gave way under the pressure of the undefeated Wildcats’ relentless ground game. A two-yard touchdown run by Mitchell Tyler with just five and a half minutes remaining capped a 15-play, 66-yard drive that gave Gouverneur its first lead of the contest.

“They had the ball. We didn’t have the ball much,” said Boyer. “They controlled the ball and kept us off the field. I give them credit. This is what they do and that’s their strength. We stopped ‘em early on. Maybe got a little tired. They got some extra first downs and just kept the clock going.”

For a while, though, it seemed the Vikings’ subsequent second-edown threat could have stopped the Wildcat field goal try. Falco had scooped up the ball with no one in front of him and, though he likely would’ve been caught from behind, the Vikings certainly would have had possession near midfield with some sudden momentum.

“They said inadvertent whistle, the play’s dead and replay the down,” said Boyer about the play and jumped in for the interception the run toward Melvin again, Cummings read.

For Dawson, in the final minute of the second quarter, to complete a third-and-24 pass to Daniel Tammaro over the middle for 22 yards and then a Hail Mary toss toward the end zone that was snared in a crowd thanks to a squib kickoff that caromed right off the foot of an unsuspecting Viking and gave Gouverneur an extra possession. Valhalla didn’t get the ball again until there were only three minutes remaining.

Three incomplete passes and a false start soon left the Vikings facing fourth-and-15 at their own 7-yard-line. But Dawson still had a little magic left in his standout sophomore season. His long jump-ball pass was again brought down out of the sky by the leaping Melvin for a first down at the Valhalla 42.

On the next play, Dawson connected with Tammaro once more for another first down inside the Wildcat 40.

Unfortunately for the Vikings, when Dawson then rolled to his right and threw on the run toward Melvin again, Cummings read the play and jumped in for the interception that put a halt to the Viking comeback bid. Gouverneur was able to run out the clock and stop Valhalla’s memorable winning streak at eight games.

“I can look back on it,” said Boyer about the final fateful pass that ended the Vikings’ dreams, “but our kids just kept going, fighting, and I give them a lot of credit. It’s been great for the program, great for the school and great for the community.”

Valhalla senior Matt Caffiero bows his head in disappointment as the final seconds tick off the clock in Saturday’s state semifinal loss.

Valhalla quarterback Michael Dawson gets set to release a long pass in the third quarter of Saturday’s state semifinal against Section 10’s Gouverneur.

The interception by Davis set the stage for Dawson in the final minute of the second quarter, to complete a third-and-24 pass to Daniel Tammaro over the middle for 22 yards and then a Hail Mary toss toward the end zone that was snared in a crowd by Rahsean Melvin at the 4-yard-line. With 2.8 seconds on the clock, Boyer turned to Gonzalez to provide the first points of the game with his foot.

With possession to start the second half, Valhalla moved the ball 65 yards in 11 plays, the biggest of them being Dawson’s 24-yard pass play to Tammaro on fourth-and-seven down to the Wildcat 7-yard-line. On first down, Falco picked up three yards. He then plowed into the end zone on the next play and, with Mussuto’s two-point conversion, it seemed the Vikings were on their way to the Carrier Dome.

But the Wildcats responded with their own 65-yard scoring drive, finally getting on the scoreboard when Cayden Stowell twisted his way into the left side of the end zone from 13 yards out. Stowell soon darted off left tackle for the two-point conversion that cut the Valhalla lead to 11-8 with 1:51 left in the third quarter.

In the fourth quarter, the Wildcats not only grabbed the lead on Tyler’s short TD run, they managed to keep the ball for the first nine minutes thanks to a squib kickoff that caromed right off the foot of an unsuspecting Viking and gave
